It's going to be a busy week for Christmas events in Moosomin this week, with Moonlight Madness set for this Thursday, December 4, along with a number of other events planned for the week.

Hot Chocolate Festival Week of Dec. 1-7

New to Moosomin, the Hot Chocolate Festival starts this week, with seven different restaurants offering specialty hot chocolates from December 1-7.

People will get a chance to try them all and vote on their favorite as they are out and about doing their Christmas shopping that week or during Moonlight Madness on Dec. 4.

Trends Mercantile, Witch's Brew, the Crate House, Cork & Bone, Red Barn, Dairy Queen and the Country Squire will all have hot chocolate on offer.

People can vote for their favorite at hotchocolate@world-spectator.com for a chance to win Moosomin Bucks.

All seven restaurants are being extra creative with their drinks. The Crate House will be serving a candy cane hot chocolate with an option to add espresso to make it a mocha latte. Trends Mercantile is serving a lavender white hot chocolate. The Red Barn is serving a butter pecan hot chocolate topped with whipped cream and caramel drizzle.

Moosomin raises over $16,000 in Holiday Smile Cookie Sales, second in Sask for most cookies sold

By NICOLE TAYLOR

LOCAL JOURNALISM INITIATIVE REPORTER
Moosomin Tim Hortons raised $16,028 in Holiday Smile Cookie sales during Holiday Smile Cookie Week from November 17-23, making it the second highest selling location in Saskatchewan, behind Humboldt who raised $22,239. In third spot was Weyburn with $12,070 in sales.

Proceeds from Moosomin's Holiday Smile Cookie sales will go toward operating costs at the Moosomin Visual Arts Centre.

"We are very pleased with those results and we are breaking the record books again," says Moosomin Tim Hortons owner Greg Crisanti. "That's the highest amount that we've done for our Holiday Smile Cookies, and it's a difficult time, it's Christmas time and the economy is tough too. We are very pleased to have this support and be able to make a donation in that amount to organizations that we truly love. We are very pleased and can't thank everyone enough."

"We knew by Wednesday (of Smile Cookie Week) that we were doing well, but we underestimated the support that we were going to be getting. The weather gods co-operated, there were no highway closures so we were busy, there was lots going on in town for sports teams and school was in. All these factors play into the week and it was amazing. We couldn't believe it. We drained a warehouse out of cookies, our supplier wasn't able to get us anymore Holiday Smile Cookies, so I think late Saturday or Sunday we had to pivot to the chocolate chunk. All these things are amazing to happen because of the support we were given, it's just remarkable."

Crisanti says he is proud of Moosomin for how well it always does in the Smile Cookie fundraisers.

"It keeps on rockin' people are definitely putting us on the map, people are asking what we're doing or seeing us on our social channels and seeing it in the paper as well. It's fantastic to be leaders in a smaller community, the amount that we do is remarkable."

"Proud is an understatement. Our teams are so thrilled to be able to do it, and it's fun for everybody. We just wrapped up our staff appreciation night on Monday as well. It just brings everybody closer together as far as the volunteers, the staff, even our guests coming in. We love doing it, and we love the challenge and the adrenaline keeps us going throughout the week. We always laugh, we don't want to see another cookie for a little bit after the week's done, but it's all playful fun."

He says the team at Tim Hortons manages will with such a high volume of cookies going out the door.

"There's a lot of timing that goes into it, as far as making sure we have enough cookies on hand throughout the week, and our freezer space is limited, so it's a balancing act to try and keep everything balanced in the freezer and organized there. This is all along with our normal operations," he says.

"We only do have two ovens in the back, so basically from Sunday evening, those ovens are going full time throughout the week. We're not shutting them off because we're still having to do our normal baking for our normal products that we carry, as well as keep up with holiday cookies.

Above and right: The 2025 Harvest of Hope crop being taken off north of Moosomin in October.

Harvest of Hope raises $26,000 to help feed the hungry

BY NICOLE TAYLOR
LOCAL JOURNALISM INITIATIVE REPORTER

Harvest of Hope has released its financial results for the season, reporting a net revenue of $26,000.

"Our net revenue is $26,000 for this harvest season," said Kyle Penner with Harvest of Hope.

Penner said that while this year's results were lower than in some recent seasons, the organization remains appreciative of the support it has received. "Averages exist for a reason, and the last few years we have done quite a bit better than this, but we are grateful for what we have got."

Penner explained that several factors influenced this year's outcome. "We had some changes in sponsorship, some different things happened with sponsors where they weren't able to support like they had in the past, and then high input costs, and the weather impacts both our crop yield and quality."

A significant portion of this year's revenue will go toward international food-security efforts. "$19,500 will be going to the Canadian Food Grains Bank, and that will be distributed through their member agencies into wherever they donate it. Lots of their focus right now is on immediate food security needs to places where people are being displaced, so Palestine, Ukraine, anywhere that there is fighting you hear about in the news, they have people working there," said Penner.

The remaining funds will support local food initiatives. "In total it will be $6,500 that is the difference that will be split between Moosomin Food Share and the Rocanville Food Bank," said Penner. "It'll be $4,900 to Moosomin and $1,600 to Rocanville."

Penner explained the importance of community involvement in sustaining the project. "The big thing that we want to make sure people know is that we are grateful for their help. It takes a big community of people to support a project like this so without their help, this type of thing would not be possible."

Penner said how even small contributions can have a large impact through matching programs. "And the other thing we want people to know is that the impact that they make, no matter how small the contribution, is very important. When you have the leveraging options of 4:1 with the Food Grains Bank, a donation of as little as $200 can make an impact of up to $1000. And so when you get that multiplier involved with what we are doing, you can feed quite a few people."

Penner said that this multiplier effect is made possible through long-standing federal partnerships. "The Food Grains Bank has a partnership that they have had since the 1980's through what is called the Canadian International Development Agency, and throughout that partnership with the Canadian Government of the distribution of foreign aid, they have been able to multiply donations through this program using tax dollars to make a bigger impact with foreign aid."

Moosomin Town Council

Council weighs options for new provincial program that would cover all recycling costs

BY NICOLE TAYLOR
LOCAL JOURNALISM INITIATIVE REPORTER

Scott Nelson and Brian Waynert of Loraas Disposal met with Moosomin Town Council at their meeting on Wednesday to discuss the town's options under the SK Recycles program. Under the program, SK Recycles will be covering the cost of all recycling in the province and is giving municipalities two options to choose between by February 1, 2026—a program-led option or a community-led option.

SK Recycles is Saskatchewan's new province-wide recycling program for household packaging and paper. The program is funded by businesses that include manufacturers, brand owners and retailers that supply packaging and paper to Saskatchewan residents. SK Recycles works with producers, local governments, First Nations and Métis communities, private companies, other organizations and residents to create a standard province-wide recycling network.

Nelson and Waynert said that under the program-led option, SK Recycles would choose who does recycling collection for the town. Under the community-led option, it would be up to the town who does their recycling.

They suggested the community-led option to the town, pointing out it would give the town more control, and that the town could opt out of it any time and switch to the program-led option if they want.

Under the community-led option, the town would need to become an associate member of Red Coat Waste Authority which would allow them to have control over who comes into the town to do recycling collection. Red Coat would receive the money from SK Recycles to cover the cost of the recycling and Loraas would invoice Red Coat.

Loraas said they could start picking up recycling under the community-led option as soon as June 1, 2026.

Regardless of which program the town chooses, the town will no longer pay for the cost of recycling, and the new program will save Moosomin residents $30 a quarter—$120 a year—on their garbage and recycling bills.

The town decided to table any decision on which option they are choosing so that they could discuss it further and make a decision at a future meeting.

Town will compete in national Communities in Bloom competition in 2027

Council passed a motion that Moosomin compete in the 2027 national Communities in Bloom competition.

The town competed in the national competition in 2026 and received five blooms with a special mention for their work at Bradley Park.

The choice to compete nationally came after the town won in its population category at the provincial level in 2024.

Councillor Andie Hodgson made the motion to participate again at the national level.

"I think it's a good way to get the community involved, because the community members do so much for us with our beautification and they really do take pride in contributing to the community," she said.

"I think we have a lot of great accomplishments in it. And I think it results in a lot of community improvement, whether it's town-wide cleanup or other initiatives that we might not necessarily have the support with if we don't participate in Communities in Bloom, and I think we've been successful in our accomplishments and I would like that continue."

Truman wants people to take action to deter deer in town in the winter

Councillor Heather Truman said she wanted to start being pro-active when it came to educating people about deterring deer in town this winter.

Over the last few years, Moosomin has seen large numbers of deer move into town during the winter months. The deer have caused damage to people's yards and have come close to being hit on the streets on multiple occasions.

Truman said she wanted to work on giving people tips on how to deter deer including wrapping their cedar trees in the winter months so that the deer aren't encouraged to eat them, taking down bird feeders, and discouraging people from actively feeding the deer.

She said she would be looking into initiatives that some other communities had taken to deter deer in town.

Town hall meeting being planned for January

Council is planning to hold a town hall meeting in January and settled on a tentative date of Wednesday, January 28 at 7 pm at the Moosomin Sportsplex.

At the meeting, each committee would provide a report and then take questions from the public.

Towler, Hodgson working on motions for SUMA convention

Councillor Garry Towler told council he'd like to draft a resolution to bring forth at the SUMA convention in April that would allow business owners who do not live within town limits to run for council. He said there have been lots of people who own businesses and have been invested in the community who would be interested in being on town council, however current municipal election rules stipulate that a person must live within the town in order to be on council.

Council discussed some of the pros and cons that could come from a motion like that, and then decided to table it in order to better define who exactly could run for council under the motion.

Councillor Andie Hodgson also said she would like to bring forth a motion at the SUMA convention to lobby the government to help with the costs of decommissioning landfills so that municipalities don't bear the brunt of the cost when they decide to decommission a landfill.

Motions presented at SUMA are voted on at the convention. If they pass SUMA advocates for changes based on the motion.

Town hears from Caring Communities

There was a delegation from Caring Communities at the meeting on Wednesday. Rolna Franke and Paige Volk attended the meeting to talk about what Caring Communities does and the different ways they help families and people in the local area.

Made up of a small group of volunteers, the group does fundraising to help people in need, whether it is with financial difficulties or other difficulties such as health care problems that arise.

The group also runs a number of programs and initiatives such as an adopt a family program, a little pantry at the library, a school backpack program, adopt a long-term care resident program, and they sponsor swimming lessons.

They said they wanted to ensure council knew about them and what they do so that if any of the councillors knew someone who needed help, they could let them know about Caring Communities and have them reach out for help.

Money transferred for 2026 paving

Council passed a resolution to transfer $350,000 from the town's general account to their future expenditure account for paving not completed in 2025. The money will be used for 2026 paving projects.

"There is a good balancing act. I wouldn't say it's a challenge, we're fortunate enough to have done it before, but the pre-planning, we definitely go big with it to make life easier for all our staff."

Krista Crellin, the president of the Moosomin Visual Arts Centre, says she was humbled by how many people bought Holiday Smile Cookies to support the arts centre.

"Wow is my first thought, that's amazing," she said of the total raised. "Moosomin has always been such a supportive community of the Smile Cookie sales and it's so nice to know that they also were supportive of the arts centre when we were a recipient. I'm honored that Tim Hortons chose us and was just delighted."

"Having this money takes a big burden off of us.

We're a primarily volunteer run organization, we are a very busy centre, so we have a lot of overhead and costs and staff to pay, so this is really going to ease things for us."

"I think it will mostly go toward operating costs for us at this point."

"It really just reinforces our belief that our centre was needed in town and it really is heartwarming to know that we have so much community support. We are honored to be chosen, we are honored that everybody bought cookies and donated and chose to support us."

The arts centre has been open for almost two years, and Crellin says things are busy there.

"We are pretty busy, we are still trying to do at around two classes a week, pottery is really kicking off, we have a few more instructors and so much interest in the pottery classes. Every time we have them, they fill up immediately. Glass is also a popular one that fills up fast," she says. "Our kids programming is really popular as well. Our summer camp was full again this year and we had lots of good comments about that."

"We've been busy and doing fundraisers on our own. We just had our Christmas market and it was another successful market, we had quite a few people coming through. It has been a good year."

"I would just like to thank Tim's for choosing us for a recipient. I've heard nothing but really great things about working with Tims. Lyla Smart and Lynne Hafner and Jen Grant with MVAC were the ones that really were organizing and setting up with all the volunteers (to make Smile Cookies), so I'd like to say a thank you to them and to Tim's as well."

Canada and Sask extend the Canada-Saskatchewan Early Learning and Child Care Agreements

On Friday, Education Minister Everett Hindley and Secretary of State (Rural Development) Buckley Belanger, on behalf of Canada's Minister of Jobs and Families and Minister Responsible for the Federal Economic Development Agency of Ontario, Patty Hajdu, announced the extension of the Canada-Saskatchewan Canada-Wide Early Learning and Child Care Agreement for another five years, starting in 2026-2027.

The newly negotiated extension reinforces Saskatchewan's commitment to building an early learning and child care (ELCC) system guided by a shared vision with Canada focused on quality, affordability and access.

"Affordable child care is an economic tool that helps Saskatchewan grow," Hajdu said. "When parents can find good, reliable child care, they can work, train, or build a business. That helps families earn more and helps the whole province stay competitive. In Saskatchewan, lower fees are saving families thousands of dollars and keeping more people in the workforce. We will keep working with partners to protect and expand these spaces so every child can learn, and every family can plan for a strong future."

"This agreement reflects the needs of Saskatchewan families and supports the flexibility of our child care landscape," Hindley said. "Since 2021, we have created thousands of new spaces and reduced fees to $10 a day. We will continue to build on that tremendous progress to deliver affordable, high-quality care and support the dedicated professionals who make it possible."

Also extended are the Canada-Saskatchewan Bilateral Early Learning and Child Care Agreement for another five years, starting in 2026-2027, and the Infrastructure Fund for an additional year, until 2026-2027.

The extended agreements include expanded age eligibility so that children in child care who turn six while attending Kindergarten can continue to receive $10 a day care until they complete the school year.

This multi-year federal investment of $1.6 billion will continue improving access and affordability to early learning programs and child care for children and families in Saskatchewan. Base funding for early learning and child care programs will increase by three per cent (via an escalator) per year for four years starting in 2027-2028. Saskatchewan has created more than 91 per cent of the 28,000 additional child care spaces targeted in the initial agreement with the federal government in 2021 and was the third province to reduce child care fees to $10 a day.

Saskatchewan is also committed to attracting, retaining and growing a strong and skilled workforce of Early Childhood Education (ECE) professionals. From April 2021 to September 2025, over $171 million in provincial and federal funding has supported a made-in-Saskatchewan approach, including:

- Wage enhancements of up to $8.85 per hour for certified ECEs working in regulated child care;
- Workforce enhancement grants for recruitment and retention initiatives;
- Tuition-free training and professional development for ECEs; and
- Bursaries and grants to support individuals to take training.

The extension of the Canada-Saskatchewan Early Learning and Child Care Agreements is an important step in Canada and Saskatchewan's continued work together to ensure accessible, affordable and high-quality child care.

Sask school divisions receive funding through national school food program

On November 21 Legislative Secretary for Education Barret Kropf and Secretary of State, the Honourable Buckley Belanger, on behalf of Secretary of State (Children and Youth), the Honourable Anna Gainey, announced the next phase of the National School Food Program in Saskatchewan, which will provide funding to school divisions across the province to expand existing or develop new food programs.

Earlier this year, the Governments of Saskatchewan and Canada signed a $15.8 million three-year agreement under the National School Food Program. Through the agreement, the Government of Saskatchewan is providing $6.4 million of federal funding to school divisions in the 2025-26 school year to support programs that are responsive to the needs of students attending urban, rural or northern schools.

"The National School Food Program investment will help us further achieve our goal of providing a better quality of life for Saskatchewan students, families and communities," Education Minister Everett Hindley said. "Enhanced school food programs can provide immediate relief to families' household budgets and significantly increase access and reach for students."

The new federal program builds on the work being done through the Saskatchewan Child Nutrition Program, which has provided healthy meals and skill building programs to Saskatchewan students for the past 35 years.

Throughout the agreement, the ministry will continue ongoing consultation meetings with stakeholders including school divisions, First Nations partners and francophone community representatives to seek feedback, assess progress throughout the year and identify potential improvements in programming in future years.

"By securing this National School Food agreement with the province and taking action to make this program permanent, our federal government is helping make sure kids across Saskatchewan get a good meal at school while putting more money back in parents' pockets. It's a simple, practical way to support families and set our kids up to do their best in the classroom and in life," said Canada's Secretary of State (Rural Development), the Honourable Buckley Belanger.

Funding is provided to Saskatchewan school divisions based on the Prekindergarten to Grade 12 funding distribution model, which considers factors that influence the cost of programming such as school location, enrolment and student needs.

"The National School Food Program is designed to provide nutritious meals that fuel learning and support the health of families and communities," Saskatoon Public Schools Board Chair Kim Stranden said. "Access to proper nutrition enhances student attendance, engagement, and ultimately academic success. The National School Food funding will strengthen and expand existing school nutrition programs, foster local food systems, and promote food literacy education across the division."

As announced in Budget 2024, the Government of Canada is investing $1 billion over five years to implement the National School Food Program, working with provinces and territories and Indigenous partners to enhance and expand school food programming across Canada. The National School Food Program is a landmark investment that is expected to provide access to nutritious food at school, for up to 400,000 children each year. By supporting the health and academic success of students, including those living in food-insecure households, the program promotes healthier futures and more affordability to Canadian families. That is why the Government of Canada intends to make the National School Food Program permanent. The program will receive permanent funding of $216.6 million per year, starting in 2029-30.

The Program is part of the federal government's work to build a more affordable Canada. These include the Canada Child Benefit and other investments made through targeted social programs and income supplements, helping to bring down costs for families so they can get ahead.

In our opinion:

Canada at risk of losing control of its northern territories

Canada has left the North wide open to foreign powers eager to grow their Arctic foothold

Canada is in danger of losing the Arctic because Ottawa has ignored the North for far too long.

The Canadian North makes up 40 per cent of our land mass and includes more than 19,000 islands in the Arctic Archipelago. Yet only about 120,000 people live across this enormous stretch of wilderness. Canada took control of the region in the late 19th century through territorial transfers from the Hudson's Bay Company and the British Crown, one of the largest land transfers in history.

For decades afterward, the North received little federal attention. The Second World War briefly changed that, prompting construction of the Alcan Highway and bringing new airfields and telephone lines.

The Cold War, along with the threat of Soviet bombers crossing the Pole, led to multiple radar lines. Still, Prime Minister St-Laurent admitted in the 1950s that Canadian governments had treated the North "in an almost continuing state of absence of mind."

John Diefenbaker's Progressive Conservative administration tried to reverse that neglect. In 1958, he told a Winnipeg audience: "I see a new Canada—a Canada of the North! ... We intend to carry out the legislative program of Arctic research, to develop Arctic routes, to develop those vast hidden resources the last few years have revealed."

Plans for a research and industrial city in Frobisher Bay, new roads and railway lines and wide-ranging surveys were ambitious but ultimately unaffordable. In the years that followed, both Liberal and Conservative governments again set northern development aside.

Foreign interest, however, continued to grow. The Canadian Security Intelligence Service recently reported Russian and Chinese attempts at influence and subversion in our northern territories.

American governments over the past 20 years have shown serious interest in the region's resources, which include significant oil, gas and mineral deposits, along with control of the Northwest Passage, a shipping route becoming increasingly accessible as Arctic sea ice recedes.

Canada considers those waters national; the United States, the European Union and at times China argue it is an international strait.

For all practical purposes, Canada has what amounts to no meaningful presence north of the tree line, leaving the field open to countries with far more ambition and far better-equipped forces.

Canada is in no position to defend its claims. We have no icebreakers capable of operating through the Arctic winter. We have no submarines that can work under the ice cap. We have no permanent air base for fighter jets.

And to cover two million square kilometres of Arctic territory, we have only 300 troops stationed there. The chance they could detect, let alone repel, a serious intruder is essentially zero. Without these capabilities, Canada cannot properly monitor activity in the region or enforce its sovereignty claims.

In the last federal budget, Ottawa announced a $1-billion Arctic infrastructure fund for new airports, seaports and all-season roads. Our foreign affairs minister has urged NATO to pay more attention to the Arctic, saying it "must be an organization not only that focuses on the eastern flank, but also that looks north."

These steps are gestures, not strategy. Canadian governments excel at promises but struggle with procurement, and the idea that European allies might fill the gap, considering their weak response to Russia's assault on Ukraine, is unlikely.

Our northern territory is under threat. We must use it or lose it.

It's going to be a busy week with all things Christmas!

Christmas is hitting in full force this week with three local communities all hosting late night shopping events this Thursday, December 4, along with a whole host of other events!

Let's start with Moosomin. The week kicks off with a Hot Chocolate Festival (because, hey why not?!) with seven different restaurants in town offering different hot chocolates to try from December 1-7. From gingerbread hot chocolate to lavender white hot chocolate, all of the restaurants have put some thought and creativity into their different hot chocolate creations, so make sure you try them all and vote on your favorite at hotchocolate@world-spectator.com to win Moosomin Bucks!

Then on Thursday, it's Moonlight Madness in Moosomin. Stores will be open until 9 pm that night. This is always a super busy night in Moosomin, and the local stores put on amazing specials. It's the perfect chance to get some local Christmas shopping done!

Then on Saturday, there is a free matinee kids movie at the theatre in Moosomin—another chance to drop the kids off and get some Christmas shopping in while they are distracted!

Then on Sunday morning the Moosomin Lions Club will be holding a pancake breakfast at the Armoury Hall. The breakfast is a fundraiser for Sherri Moffatt, the Kin Ability Centre, and the Lions Club.

The week wraps up with Santa Day on Sunday afternoon, when kids can get their photos taken with Santa at MacLeod Elementary School, and then that evening is the Moosomin Carol Festival.

Talk about a busy week! In Esterhazy, December 4 is a big day as the town holds its annual Moonlight Magic event and lights up their historical park that night.

Sales at local around town start at noon and run until 9 pm that night. Starting at 4:30 there will be short Christmas videos shown at Maple Leaf Theatre until 6 pm.

5-9 pm at New Outlook Wealth.

Then at 6:30 pm people can head to the Historical Park where the town will "light the night" with town council members, turning on the Christmas lights and lighting up the Christmas tree at the park. There will also be bonfires, hot chocolate, and hot dogs available at the park.

At 7:15 pm, a free movie "The Santa Clause" will be shown at Maple Leaf Theatre, and there will be free popcorn. As a thank-you for shopping locally, people will have a chance to win Esterhazy Bucks when they shop at participating businesses. First place will win $200, second place will win $150, and third place will win $100.

And then we go to Rocanville, where December 4 is also a big night! The town kicks off the Christmas season with late night shopping, its annual tree lighting, Santa photos, hayrides, and a bake sale. Stores in Rocanville will be open late that night, and the community Christmas tree will be lit at 6 pm that evening, with local Christmas carollers accompanying the tree lighting with some merry music.

Santa will be making an appearance in Rocanville that night at 6:30 pm at Conexus Credit Union where kids can have their photo taken with him. There will also be hay rides starting at 6:30 pm in the Co-op parking lot. The Grade 12 class will also be holding a bake sale that afternoon and evening at the Hope Church.

These are just SOME of the events happening in the area this week, and I'm sure there are more! Be sure to get out and enjoy everything your local communities have worked so hard to put on for the Christmas season!

Moosomin Legion holding free supper Dec. 7 for military, RCMP, Legion members and seniors

By DONNIE MATICHUK

On Sunday, December 7, the Moosomin Legion will be holding a free Holiday Dinner at the Legion hall. The supper is for veterans, members of the military, RCMP, Legion members, and seniors.

"The idea came about when I learned about the Share the Warmth grant from Sask Energy," says Donna Lafleur with the Moosomin Legion. "I took it to a meeting, and we decided that whether we got it or not, we would still hold this free holiday supper. We're really looking forward to kicking off the holidays with our seniors, veterans, and RCMP."

Lafleur says that at one point, the Moosomin Legion was not in a position to be able to put on events like this one, but thanks to community support, they are able to give back to the community now.

"Our Legion is much more active in the community than we have been in past years, because we now have the funds to do more. Years ago we were just barely holding the doors open, but thanks to support from individuals and businesses in the town, we have some more money that we can spend on supporting our veterans and RCMP."

She says that the Legion is hoping to fill the hall and provide a holiday meal for as many people as they can.

"We personally invited all the RCMP and military from the area, and after we get all of their responses, then it is open to seniors and Legion members. We decided that 150-175 attendees would probably be the most we can hold in the hall and Legion club room. I also don't know if we'll max out, because it is a busy time of year, but we'd love to have all that can attend."

"For our supper we're having ham, scalloped potatoes, desert, and anybody that wants to bring a salad can bring their own salad. It's a bit of a potluck, but just for the salads because we will provide everything else."

The Legion also reached out to Borderland Co-op to seek a reduced price on the ham for the supper, but got a pleasant surprise.

"We contacted Co-op asking for a small discount on the ham, and they replied that they would be donating the ham free of charge."

Lafleur sees this as an opportunity to give back to the community and those who have supported the Legion in the past.

"Part of the Legion's motto is to serve, which involves our veterans, RCMP and their families. Part of doing that, especially at this time of year, is addressing the social isolation that can affect many older members of the community. Their kids and grandkids might not be around or close to here, so they might not have anyone around for the holidays. This way, at least we can give them something to get out and be with others closer to the holiday season."

The Legion's Remembrance Day supper on Nov. 11. On Dec. 7 the Moosomin Legion will be holding a free Christmas supper for military, RCMP, Legion members and seniors.

The Legion members say they have discussed making the free Holiday Dinner an annual event, but would like to see how the first year goes.

"We would love to have this every year. As of now we'd like to see how year one goes and how many people we get to come out before making plans for next year," she said.

"We're hoping for 100-175 people attend, and we have 100 seats reserved for our RCMP and veterans. I don't think we'll get all of our RCMP officers in the area, as they are very busy, but I do hope we get as many as possible to come for supper."

She says that being able to give back to the community and show support for seniors and veterans is a great feeling.

"It feels phenomenal. I can't even express how grateful we are that the community supports us, and so in turn, we can support the community. When I first took over, we were in danger of closing our doors, and now we can donate back and be able to give more and more support to those who could use it."

"We've been told by a few people that we should put up a donation jar, because they don't want to come for supper and not give anything, but we've asked for zero donations, because that's not the point. We are putting this on as a thank you for supporting us, and to give back to those who have made sacrifices for the freedoms we have. It's our Christmas gift to the community," she said.

Nutrien Rocanville receives Technology Fund grant for sustainable mining initiative

BY ASHLEY BOCHIE

Nutrien Rocanville was recently awarded $1.2 million from the provincial government for their new innovative technology for more efficient and sustainable mining.

The Saskatchewan Technology Fund is a provincial fund that helps support industrial projects in reducing emissions and drive sustainable growth.

Justin Young and Tim Mbanga of Nutrien Rocanville explain their new innovative project chosen among nine other projects funded by the Saskatchewan Technology Fund. Nutrien Rocanville is the largest potash producer in the country and is continuing building opportunities for long term growth.

"We're actively exploring opportunities across our potash network," Young explained. "With the global population steadily rising and the amount of arable land for crop production shrinking, we face a critical challenge, ensuring we can increase crop yields to meet growing food demand. That's why it's essential we continue to expand our production capabilities—so we can help feed the future and support global food security."

Striving toward efficiency

Tim Mbanga, Mill Maintenance Superintendent at Nutrien Rocanville, highlights the company's commitment to operational efficiency and sustainability.

"The most important thing is efficient production of resources—maximizing recoveries, reducing waste, and minimizing emissions," he explains. This approach aligns with Nutrien's broader corporate strategy to optimize its three core segments, Upstream (manufacturing facilities, for example, Mines), midstream (distribution and logistics), and downstream (agricultural customer / end-user support).

"Unlike traditional fertilizer producers, Nutrien offers an integrated model that spans from mining and manufacturing to customer engagement. This includes soil testing, pH control, and tailored fertilizer recommendations," Mbanga explains, as game changer services within the industry.

"Before Nutrien was formed in 2018, PotashCorp focused solely on fertilizer production with limited distribution. Today, Nutrien provides a complete support chain from manufacturing to the farmgate, and no competitor offers this level of integration."

Saskatchewan Technology Fund

Mbanga explains Nutrien's efforts to innovate through provincial programs.

"Recently, Nutrien Rocanville applied for the provincial Technology Fund, initiated by corporate outreach encouraging project submissions. The Fund was aimed at supporting industry-driven technology, innovation and improvement projects that mitigate, sequester or capture greenhouse gas (GHG) emissions. I saw that as an opportunity for the Ultrafines Recovery Project, so I talked to Justin Young, explained to him about the funding and said to him, 'I have a project in mind and I would like to apply' and he said 'If you have all the information, let's put our best foot forward and get that application in', and we did exactly that."

employees and multiple priorities, having this external support gives us the momentum we need."

The funding highlights Nutrien's commitment to sustainability and innovation, enabling the company to accelerate projects that deliver measurable environmental benefits while maintaining operational efficiency.

The project

Nutrien Rocanville is taking a big step toward sustainability and operational efficiency with an innovative project initiated by Mill Maintenance Superintendent Tim Mbanga.

The initiative focuses on upgrading unit processes in the site's older mill, which was built in the late 1960s and is nearing the end of its lifecycle.

"The question was, what would it take to restore this unit operation and extend its life by another 30 to 40 years?" Mbanga explains.

The crystallization process is the most challenging and is traditionally used to convert fine potash particles into larger crystals suitable for sale. This process is energy-intensive, requiring temperatures up to 100°C. However, Nutrien's newer mill, commissioned in 2016, introduced advanced drying technology that eliminates the need for crystallization. "We proved that we can process fine potash without crystallizing it, which improves safety and reduces energy consumption," says Mbanga.

"Rather than installing new dryers in the older mill—a costly option—the team designed a solution to leverage existing capacity in the newer facility. "We decided to send ultra-fine product directly to the new mill for drying. This technology was groundbreaking when implemented in 2012—the first and largest of its kind in the potash industry—and we've proven it works," Mbanga notes.

The project is expected to significantly reduce greenhouse gas emissions and energy use—one of the key reasons it was selected among nine other projects by the Saskatchewan Technology Fund. "The emissions reduction is substantial. From an energy standpoint, this project is about creating technology that minimizes or eliminates unnecessary consumption," Mbanga emphasizes.

Collaborative process

Mbanga says the project application was a collaborative process among himself and coworkers.

"I worked with site leadership, Rocanville site and corporate resources to prepare and submit a proposal aimed at leveraging this funding opportunity. This initiative reflects Nutrien's ongoing drive to leverage technology and funding opportunities to enhance efficiency and sustainability across its operations."

Young adds, "This funding that we received from the provincial government will be going toward Tim's idea on the Ultrafine potash recovery project. We are in the early design stages of the project and this funding will help push that along. We received $1.2 million from the Saskatchewan Technology Fund. We are currently also working with the federal government on another grant that could add a few more dollars to the pot for this specific project. Hopefully, if we do get both grants it should cover about 10 per cent of the total project cost. The rest would be covered by our capital sustaining budget, and we currently have that within our capital plan, and we are expecting this project will be online in 2027."

Nutrien Rocanville has secured additional financial support for its emissions-reduction initiative, with conditional approval from both provincial and federal programs. Alongside $1.2 million from the Saskatchewan Technology Fund, the site has secured $2 million through the federal Green Industrial Facilities and Manufacturing Program (GIFMP), totaling government contributions to approximately $3.2 million—about 10 per cent of the project's overall cost.

"This level of support is significant," says Mbanga. "The government recognizes the role we can play in reducing emissions and mitigating global warming. Their financial backing is critical because despite Nutrien's size, we compete internally for capital across numerous projects—terminals, rail, other mines, and more. With over 20,000

"It was very expensive to run the crystallizer in mill one because of the high temperatures involved and the amount of gas you're consuming, so moving that cost from the balance sheet also has me excited. Then lastly improving our recovery going forward to ensure that we are maximizing what we are getting out of the ore has me thrilled. Those would be my three biggest improvements that this new project gives us."

"It helps us out with safety, production cost, and our production efficiency."

Largest potash producer

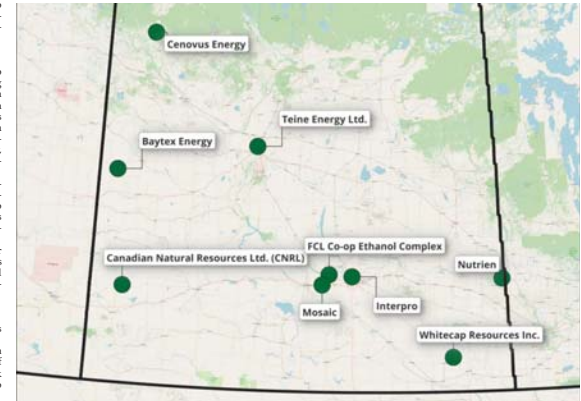

Young says Nutrien is the world's largest potash producer and is continuing to grow.

"If you were to look across the globe based on our potash network, Nutrien is the world's largest potash producer and Nutrien Rocanville is one of the world's largest potash operations."

"We have seen steady growth for multiple years and looking into the future, continue to see steady growth for global demand."

"I believe that probably played into us being chosen among the other nine projects for this funding from the Technology Fund," he adds.

"I see that Mosaic also received funding with a very different project, but something similar in the space getting funded—I think it's great that the Saskatchewan government recognizes the impact potash has, not only in the province, but around the world, and recognizing companies like ours and Mosaic's. That is very important."

A map showing the locations of the various projects that are receiving funds under the Technology Fund.

Industry's importance to province

Nutrien Rocanville is focused on shaping the future of mining with a strong commitment to sustainability and responsible resource development. "The main goal is to produce potash as ethically and efficiently as possible," says Mbanga, Mill Maintenance Superintendent. "The greenhouse effect and global warming are real—we're seeing plus-degree temperatures in late November here in Saskatchewan, which is unusual. That reality drives our focus on reducing emissions."

Mbanga emphasizes that Saskatchewan has a unique opportunity to lead by example. "The province holds 27 of Canada's 34 critical minerals, and potash is the largest among them. Saskatchewan has the world's largest potash deposits, and we want customers and investors to know that our product is produced responsibly. If we can demonstrate that sustainable mining works here, it's a win for the province, the country, and future generations."

Mbanga adds that government support for these initiatives is motivating. "When you see the province and federal government backing projects like this, it speaks volumes about the shared commitment to reducing environmental impact and ensuring long-term sustainability."

Young adds, "I do think it is valuable for our government to ensure that we are continuing to fund projects like this one that is essentially reducing our carbon footprint."

End goal

The ultrafine recovery project at Nutrien Rocanville has been in development for several years, with a clear focus on efficiency and cost reduction. "We've worked on this project for quite a few years and wanted to minimize the capital requirement significantly," says Mbanga. "Refurbishing the entire circuit would cost over $100 million, but with this approach, we can achieve the same goal for less than a third of that amount."

The proposal impressed both government agencies and Nutrien's leadership.

"What we presented to the government was well received and approved, and capital approval team liked the idea. As far as I know, it's been pre-approved, and is in the Rocanville site five-year Capital Plan," Mbanga explains.

"We're now moving into the detailed engineering design phase, which will determine final funding and execution." This strategic approach demonstrates how innovation can create significant operational improvements while controlling costs—a critical factor in sustaining long-term competitiveness.

Young adds, "Ultimately this project allows us to make sure we are maximizing the recovery, we are maximizing the amount of potash we are pulling out of the ore through the milling process."

"We are increasing our efficiency and maximizing our recoveries." Capital projects of this scale are uncommon at Nutrien Rocanville, making the ultrafine recovery initiative a milestone for the site. "Projects of this magnitude happen once in a long time," says Mbanga. "The crystallizer circuit we're replacing was implemented in the 1970s, and it's taken decades to phase it out. Major projects of this nature come with unique challenges. 'You have to prove to many things, convince multiple stakeholders, and demonstrate that the end goal will improve operations long term. It's not something that happens often, which makes this project even more significant.'"

Nutrien Rocanville General Manager Justin Young.

Moosomin Elks raise over $24,000 for Playfair Daycare

By KARA KINNA

The Moosomin Elks Club made a $24,400 donation to Playfair Daycare last week with proceeds raised from their 50/50 draw, as well as from their 75th anniversary celebration.

"For our 75th anniversary we decided we wanted to make a splash of some sort, and we knew that the new daycare needed some money. So we decided to run a 50/50 with one winner and it did really well," says Ron Potter with the Moosomin Elks. "We had 2,500 tickets to sell, and we sold over 2,000 right here in Moosomin. Probably 75 per cent of them were sold at the Co-op grocery store just from people walking in and deciding to support us."

In total the 50/50 draw made $20,800 with half of the proceeds going to local winner Tracy Russell.

Potter says the Elks decided to top of the $10,400 from the 50/50 with additional money raised from the silent auction at their 75th anniversary celebration, as well as some of their own donation money.

"We were discussing at our meeting the other night, and decided that the money raised from our silent auction at the 75th anniversary party would also go to the daycare. So we had the lottery money, plus the $4,400, so we thought why don't we make it an even $20,000 plus the $4,000 from the auction, so that's where we came up with the total of $24,400."

"Our lottery licence only lets the daycare use the money we give for toys, or tables and chairs, or playground equipment, but not for building supplies. Any equipment that they may need for inside the building, I'm glad we're able to help with that," he said.

"I think it's a very worthwhile project, and the boys are pretty happy with the work we've done and the money we've raised. We generally do something like this every fall, and this year I think we've contributed to something that was really needed," said Larry Tomlinson with Moosomin Elks Lodge.

Jill Jones with Playfair Daycare says that they were thrilled to receive the donation, and that progress on the new building has been steady.

"We're really happy to get this money from the Elks for the capital investment in the new building. If anyone hasn't driven by, we encourage you to take a peak south of the elementary school. There are some walls going up and the rafters were also just put in today," she said last week. "We're hoping this nice fall weather continues and we can get a bit more done and gain some ground before any big snowfall. The donation for toys and other things like that is going to be really helpful, because we all know how hard kids can be on toys. With this money, hopefully we can also put some of it toward the backyard and make that a really good space for the kids."

Potter added that selling the 50/50 tickets was a team effort by the Elks and the Daycare.

"Originally the daycare girls took 25 books of tickets, and after not too long they'd turned around and were saying they needed more. I was trying to sell as much as I can to make some money for them and they sold twice as much as us old guys!

"I'd really like to thank anyone who bought tickets, and I'd like to thank all the businesses that let us sell tickets at their locations, especially Red Barn and the Co-op. The funny thing was, Tracy's ticket that won was a ticket that her employer had bought for her. I was really impressed with the community and that everyone around here was on board. I set a target for myself of 2,000 tickets sold, and we ended up getting to around 2,080."

"One thing that really showed me how far kindness can spread is that during our Walk-a-thon this year, we had a group from Nipawin that had come down. They donated $750 right to the daycare. That's why I love being part of the Elks, they had seen that we were trying to raise money, and that made them want to help out and give some money as well," he said.

Playfair Daycare says that they are still looking for more ways to fundraise for the new building.

"We're still coming up with ideas and still looking into different ways we can raise some money for our new building. We have a very new team, and are having meetings to figure out the best way to approach fundraising. Ways we can send the message to businesses in town, that we can do as much for them as they can to help us," said Jones.

"We greatly appreciate groups like the Elks being able to help us out, and for believing in us. We thank everyone who has supported us and continues to support us in this project," added Terri Lowe from the daycare.

Potter also noted that he was glad the winner came from Moosomin.

"I was hoping we'd have a local winner, just because that's where our target was. This is a very local project, and so I was happy to see we had a winner from here in town who was very deserving of the prize."

Moosomin Community Recreation Plan

Back in 2020 around Covid times our department undertook the task to develop a 10-year Community Recreation plan that would take us from 2020 to 2030. This included administration, programming and facilities. The tasks outlined in the CRP were as a direct result of community requests.

As a result of an amazing community we have been able to get the entire plan completed in five years!

Just a sample of tangible results includes:

- Feasibility Study on New Skating Rink
- Feasibility Study on New Curling Rink
- Feasibility Study on New Fieldhouse
- New Outdoor Court Space
- Terry Lynd Basketball Courts
- Bradley Park 2-2 Basketball Courts
- Pickleball Courts
- Fun World
- Dog Park
- Pharmasave Field
- Sharpe's Field
- Upgrades to Ball Diamonds
- Upgrades to Football Field
- Upgrades to Soccer Field
- Bradley Park Lending Shed / with equipment
- Bradley Park Paving Project

So now it is onto a new 10-year plan. With that we will be looking for public input again with what the public would like to see. Questionnaires, public and private meetings will make up the meat and potatoes of the plan.

For those interested, watch in early 2026 for calls to the public for input!

Moosomin/Broadview RCMP Report

BY S/SGT. DALLYN HOLMSTROM

189 calls for service

From November 14 to 27 there were 189 calls for service in the Broadview and Moosomin Detachment area with 44 traffic fines issued. Most of the fines were for speeding. The highest speeder of the week was issued to a male driving a Honda Accord travelling 155 km/hr on Highway 1 in a 110 km/hr zone near Broadview. This driver received a fine of $742. The second vehicle, coming in second place this week, was a male driving a Ford Bronco travelling 121 km/hr in an 80 km/hr zone on Highway 1 near Moosomin who received a fine of $578.

Collision involving a Peacekeeper truck

On November 14, RCMP were called to a collision on Ochapowace First Nation involving a peacekeeper truck. The collision took place when the vehicle hit a large rut in the road and the truck exited the road and struck a tree. Airbags were deployed but luckily, no one was as hurt in the collision.

Counterfeit bills being used

On November 14, RCMP received a complaint involving a counterfeit $100 bill at the Broadview Coop Gas Station. The RCMP quickly shared the information and monitored calls in neighboring detachments. The suspects were caught using the counterfeit bills in Yorkton and in Langenburg and luckily RCMP were able to obtain video of the suspects. RCMP then located the suspects. They have been charged accordingly.

Intoxicated man causing trouble in Broadview

On November 14, RCMP were called to the Broadview Bar where an intoxicated man was causing problems, swearing at staff, causing a disturbance, and refusing to leave. RCMP attended the bar and the male had already left the bar. RCMP made patrols but were unable to locate the intoxicated male.

911 call for cows mooing too loud

On November 15, RCMP members received a 911 call from a tired male near Broadview that couldn't sleep because "the cows" were mooing too loud. Luckily, the cows quieted down and was no longer mooing when police attended. They must have realized it was pasture bedtime. All jokes aside, 911 should be used for emergencies only and cows mooing is not an emergency no matter how sleep deprived you may be.

Worried for intoxicated man

On November 16, RCMP received a 911 call requesting police at a residence in Grenfell. RCMP attended and located a man who had drank too much alcohol and was puking. The man refused EMS and was left with a sober adult to monitor them. The caller stated they were just scared and called 911.

Man steals alcohol from bar and flees from police

On November 16, RCMP received a complaint about an adult male who stole two bottles of liquor from a bar in Moosomin. The business owner provided the plate that the male departed in and advised he was intoxicated. RCMP located the vehicle that fled from police on three separate occasions before the vehicle stopped working. The male was then arrested for impaired operation, theft, dangerous driving and flight from police. The male was provided a room at the RCMP Bed and Breakfast and held for court.

Assault at a residence in Grenfell

On November 17, RCMP were called to a residence in Grenfell when an intoxicated female was slapped across the face in an argument. The female refused to talk to police or tell them what took place so no charges could be laid. The female did attend the hospital with EMS to ensure her nose was not broken. RCMP were then called to the hospital when the female became combative and started throwing things around at the hospital. RCMP attended and arrested the female and provided her with a comfortable night stay at the RCMP bed and breakfast. I have my doubts the beds are as nice as the ones provided at the hospital.

Uttering threats

On November 17, RCMP received a call from a concerned female who reported that her ex-boyfriend texted her and threatened to come to her house and hurt her new boyfriend. This is still under investigation, however, it is very likely that the ex-boyfriend's comments will result in him getting charged for uttering threats.

Smashed vehicle window at Moosomin hospital

On November 19, between 1:30 and 4 pm, a 2012 GMC Sierra was parked at the Moosomin Hospital and the window was smashed out of it. RCMP are working on getting the CCTV to review. RCMP is requesting anyone with information about this mischief to contact the Moosomin RCMP by calling 306-435-3361. Information can be submitted anonymously through CrimeStoppers by calling 1-800-222-TIPS (8477) or submitting a tip online at www.saskcrimestoppers.com

Theft at the Co-op grocery in Whitewood

On November 20, RCMP received a complaint of a male and female that were at the Co-op Grocery Store in Whitewood and obtained over $100 worth of goods before leaving without paying. The male and female have been identified and will be getting charged with theft.

Intoxicated female causing trouble

On November 20, RCMP received a call of a highly intoxicated female causing problems at a residence on Kahkewistahaw First Nations. RCMP attended and arrested the female who spent the night at the RCMP Bed and Breakfast until she was sober.

Impaired drivers charged for multiple violations

On November 21, RCMP were called to Cowessess First Nations where a vehicle had hit the ditch and the driver appeared to be intoxicated. RCMP attended and determined two adult males had driven the vehicle in a short period of time and obtained statements from witnesses to confirm. Both males were charged with impaired driving and spent the night in the RCMP bed and breakfast. One of the males also ended up being charged with uttering threats, mischief, resisting arrest, and failure to comply with court conditions he was supposed to be following. The vehicle was towed and impounded.

Man charged with assault and uttering threats

On November 21, RCMP were called to an assault that took place on Ochapowace First Nations. An adult male assaulted his sister who was intoxicated at the time. When RCMP arrived on scene the suspect male fled into the bush but was quickly apprehended and arrested for his actions. The male suspect was lodged at the RCMP bed and breakfast and has been charged with uttering threats, assault, and assault with a weapon. Luckily, the adult female was not seriously injured during the assault.

Intoxicated man falls off deck trying to get into residence in Broadview

On November 22, RCMP were called to a residence in Broadview where an intoxicated male was trying to get into a residence he was not welcome at. RCMP attended and located the intoxicated male standing on the deck of the residence still trying to gain entry. When RCMP announced their presence, the male fell off the deck onto the ground due to his intoxication level before he was arrested and provided a room to stay at the RCMP bed and breakfast.

Possible drug transaction

On November 23, RCMP came across a possible drug transaction taking place. The suspect vehicle fled to a residence and the female driver ran inside the residence. RCMP pursued and followed the female to the house. Officers then observed the female through a basement window emptying her pockets of what was believed to be small baggies of drugs onto a bed. The female then took off running from the residence into the bush where members apprehended her.

RCMP returned to look for the suspected drugs, but they had been removed by someone prior to RCMP returning. The suspect female was arrested and charged for breaching her conditions, flight from police and resist arrest. However, the female did avoid possible drug charges. This female also earned the right to stay at the RCMP Bed and Breakfast until court.

Theft of stained glass memorial windows at old Anglican Church

On November 24 RCMP received a call to the old Anglican Church in Grenfell. Two stained glass memorial windows had been removed and stolen. RCMP is requesting anyone with information about this theft to contact the Broadview RCMP by calling 306-696-5200. Information can be submitted anonymously through CrimeStoppers by calling 1-800-222-TIPS (8477) or submitting a tip online at www.saskcrimestoppers.com.

Near collision with intoxicated driver

On November 26, RCMP were called to a near collision on Zagime Anishinabek First Nations. The caller suspected the driver was impaired and several people in the band office were scared to leave due to his erratic driving. RCMP attended and located the suspected intoxicated driver and placed him under arrest for impaired driving. The suspect provided samples of his breath that confirmed his alcohol levels were double the legal limit.

Big Six Hockey League

Weekend of blowouts in the southeast

BY DONNIE MATICHUK

Last week in the Big Six Hockey League was full of big wins for some of the teams early in the 2025/26 season. With each team now having three to five games under their belt, fans can start to see how the regular season could shake out.

Starting on November 19 at the Carnduff Centennial Arena, the hometown Red Devils took on the powerhouse Redvers Rockets. The first period started slow, before the Rockets' Trevor Dumaine opened the scoring at the 10:30 mark. Carson Henrion potted another for Redvers just 30 seconds later, and Drew Hoff also scored to make it 3-0 after 20 minutes of play. Redvers took full control of the game in the second period, scoring eight more goals and allowing just two from Carnduff's Justin Byers and Ty Stovin. Carson Henrion of Redvers impressed fans with a hat trick, with Oliver Poirier, Jordon Miller, and Kenton Miller all picking up three point games.

Next on the Big Six schedule was the November 21 match-up between the Moosomin Rangers and Oxbow Huskies. This game started with fireworks early. Moosomin led 2-1 after just 2:48, with goals coming from the Huskies' Alex Von Sprecken, and the Rangers' Justin Lamontagne and Ryker Cole. The first period ended at 4-2 Moosomin, with Cole scoring his second of the night, Carter Sawchuk capitalized on a slick feed from Bud Holloway, and Oxbow's Jayden Davis giving the Huskies momentum late in the second. The second period was a close, back and forth game, with Sawchuk giving Moosomin a 5-2 lead with three minutes left. Oxbow would add another late goal with thirty seconds left in the period to give them hope. The third period was nerve wracking for Rangers fans, as they had to kill off a double minor midway through the period, but Moosomin managed to keep the score at 5-3 until the final buzzer. Bud Holloway and Justin Lamontagne were excellent for the Rangers, each picking up three points in the win.

The next night was a double-header Saturday, with Redvers taking on the KW Oil Kings in Kipling, and Moosomin making the trip to Carnduff to face the Red Devils. The Rockets picked up a win by a big margin after a slow start to the game. They led 2-1 after the first period, and completely took control in the second and third. Redvers scored three times in the first and five in the third while keeping the Oil Kings scoreless. The game ended 10-1 Redvers, with Kenton Miller of the Rockets scoring five goals earning six points on the night.

The Moosomin-Carnduff game had many goals and many penalties, with Moosomin picking up 59 PIMs and Carnduff getting 63 for a game total of 122. The Rangers scored 53 seconds into the game courtesy of Travis Statz. The first period ended at 4-0 Moosomin, with goals coming from Statz, Bud Holloway, Carter Sawchuk, and Monty Driver. The penalty parade began in the second, with 38 PIMs coming from one play midway through the period. The Rangers added another four goals to bring the game to 8-0 after 40 minutes. The third period saw the Rangers' special teams units take advantage, as they scored three goals on the powerplay and one short handed to end the game 12-0. Bud Holloway was the MVP of the game, scoring four times and picking up five assists. Moosomin had seven different goal scorers and had 10 players record points in the game.

Next week in the Big Six features the Carnduff Red Devils going on the road to Carlyle to face the Cougars. The Wawota Flyers also head south to battle the Oxbow Huskies. The last Friday night game is the Midale Mustangs hosting the Moosomin Rangers. The next night sees both the Cougars and Flyers back in action at the Wawota Forum, and the Rangers hosting the KW Oil Kings at the Mike Schween Arena.

Sask East Hockey League

BY DONNIE MATICHUK

The SEHL had eight games last weekend, shaking up the standings in the young season. There were many great games to watch around the league, starting on Friday the 21st.

The Canora Cobras hosted the Preeceville Pats at the Civic Center, and took the lead late in the first period with a goal by Nikolas Gordon, and followed it up with another by Kody Rock to end the first 2-0. The Cobras took that momentum into the second, scoring another four goals, with three coming within one minute midway through the period. The final twenty minutes was all Canora, with them cashing in five times to take the game 11-0. Carter Dereniwsky picked up six points in the big win.

Next was the Swan Valley Axemen travelling to Cote First Nation Arena to take on the Selects. Cote scored just 57 seconds in from Tristan Keshane, but gave up five goals in the first period to the Axemen, with Brock Jersak scoring twice, and Josh Tripp scoring a natural hat trick to put Swan Valley up 5-1. The second period saw Swan add four more goals to go up 9-1. In the third, the Axemen took advantage of a ten-minute misconduct to score twice more on the powerplay, and added another a minute later. Cote scored with 26 seconds left, but the game was all but decided with Swan Valley taking it 11-2.

Rocanville made the trip to Esterhazy that Friday night as well. The Tigers started the game by taking advantage of back-to-back powerplays and going up 2-0. The early lead wouldn't last as Esterhazy capitalized on their own string of powerplays to end the first period up 4-2. The middle frame saw the Flyers make it 5-2 early, and the last five minutes featured four goals in quick succession, three from Rocanville and one from Esterhazy to end the period 6-5 Flyers. With the momentum from the second, the Tigers tried to stage a comeback, but two goals allowed ended those hopes, and Esterhazy took the W 8-5.

Langenburg headed west to Russell to face the Rams, and took the game handily 11-3. The game had strong showings from Langenburg's Taylor Thompson and Jaymes Knee with six points each.

The Wapella Blackhawks took on the Churchbridge Imperials, with both teams trying to get some early points in the standings. Churchbridge went into the third period up 3-0, but gave up a shorthanded goal and one more and let the Hawks back in the game. However, two late goals secured the win for Churchbridge 5-2.

The next night Langenburg hosted Canora, and it would be a close game that ended 4-2 for Langenburg. The Warriors' special teams were a standout, scoring three times on the night.

Preeceville went on the road to Theodore in a game that was all Buffaloes. Theodore scored 7 times in the second period alone, and had all 16 skaters on the roster record a point to take the game 15-0.

Finally, Russell made their way to Churchbridge, and gave fans an exciting back-and-forth game. The Imperials scored with just 40 seconds left in the second to take a 3-2 lead, and after the Rams battled back to tie it, Churchbridge took the lead and added two empty-netters to win 6-3.
