Rural and Remote Health Minister Tim McLeod: 'We've identified a path forward to have a CT Scanner in Moosomin'

BY ASHLEY BOCHEK
AND KEVIN WEEDMARK
Saskatchewan Rural and Remote Health Minister Tim McLeod told the World-Spectator Wednesday that the government has found a path forward to have a CT Scanner in Moosomin.

McLeod and Moosomin MLA Steven

Bonk met with community representatives Tuesday, and spoke with the World-Spectator following the budget on Wednesday.

"I was really excited to have that meeting with the community and MLA Steven Bonk. We were happy to find a place where we've identified a path forward to have a CT scanner in Moosomin," said McLeod.

He said he believes the local reps at the meeting were excited about the scanner proposal.

"The mood at the meeting was generally excitement and we certainly are happy to continue to work with the community," he said. "There's a fairly generous community and foundation there. They've done a lot of great work. We've done pretty well to come to a point where we've identified a path forward for this project."

He said the ministry and the community will work together on coming up with a framework agreement for the CT Scanner.

Rural and Remote Health Minister Tim McLeod:

'We've identified a path forward to have a CT Scanner in Moosomin'

McLeod said a lot of details still have to be worked out. "At this point what we're doing is we're working together with the community and the ministry to establish a framework and we're still working on those details. It's still being worked on as we speak. We're happy to continue to work together with the community and the foundation to build that framework that allows us a path forward."

The CT Scanner would be community or privately owned, and SHA would pay for the scans.

"It's something that we're actively working on right now but we could expect it in a few weeks—we're starting to see a clearer picture of the framework."

Whether the proprietor would have the right to provide private scans as well as serving the public system is another detail that has yet to be worked out, said McLeod.

"That will be one of the criteria being established within the framework but we certainly anticipate that, yes."

"The location of the CT scanner would be part of the framework and we're still working on that but we're pleased with the conversations that we've had at this point and we're really excited that we've identified a path forward that will result in a CT Scanner for Moosomin."

He said Moosomin didn't meet the criteria for a CT Scanner under current SHA rules, so the government wanted to come up with a framework that would work for Moosomin and could be applied in other communities as well.

"Where Moosomin falls didn't meet the criteria SHA has, so we've had to work together with the community to identify a framework that can be consistently applied, not just for Moosomin, but across Saskatchewan for all communities that fit under the same category as Moosomin. We're working on that framework and hopefully, we'll have something more concrete in the coming weeks."

"We're trying to identify some guidelines and some criteria that can be applied fairly across the province, so that when other communities come forward, then we have a consistent approach. So that if a community like Moosomin is looking for the same type of service, then we've got some type of framework that can be consistently applied for everyone."

He said Estevan will have a similar framework developed, as a local person had offered to purchase an MRI for St. Joseph's Hospital in Estevan, which didn't fit into any program until now.

McLeod said the government has to work on unique solutions for communities like Moosomin, which has some unique aspects to its health care, such as having 14 doctors, far more than any other community its size, being the smallest community in Saskatchewan to offer chemotherapy, but provides it to more patients than larger centres, and offering a medical residency program.

"That's a great question, and it is the reason we're developing the framework," he said. "And there's not an easy answer to that. As you know, it's something we've been working on for some time. It's taken us a while to get to this point, and we are really excited to be able to reach this point, where we can at least communicate to the community that we have found a positive path forward."

The budget includes a $5.1-million increase to expand capacity for specialized CT and MRI medical imaging services.

McLeod sees way forward to CT Scanner for Moosomin

Saskatchewan Rural and Remote Health Minister Tim McLeod told World-Spectator reporter Ashley Bocek that he can see a path toward a CT Scanner for Moosomin. The World-Spectator was at the Legislature for the 2024 budget.

Moosomin Visual Arts Centre launches after-school art program

BY RYAN KIEDROWSKI
LOCAL JOURNALISM INITIATIVE REPORTER

A new after-school program is sure to get the creative juices flowing for kids in and around Moosomin. Starting April 8, the Moosomin Visual Arts Centre will begin programming weekday afternoon for students ages 7 to 12.

"Art is known to create more creative problem solvers, so that's awesome for anything you choose to do in your life, too. People who practice art are happier people, usually," said Krista Crellin, MVAC chair. "We just want to give the kids that are interested in art an opportunity to create in a safe space. We obviously love art, and I think it's important to the growth of our kids and community."

The task at hand is to diverge from the 'cut and paste' methodology, instead fostering creativity and the chance to explore what form of expression youth most align with.

"We hope to deepen their understanding of design elements and composition and all the different materials that we have available to them," Crellin explained. "Just really give them a chance to explore their creativity far more than what they would get in school."

Crellin anticipates space for 10 students each day under the guidance of retired teacher Melissa Magnumson.

"She's a creative person, too, so I think they'll have a lot of fun with her," Crellin said.

While programs such as this may seem grassroots, exposure to artistic freedom at a young age can propel one's mind, creating learning skills often drawn upon later in life.

"Hopefully, they find an area of art that really interests them and continue to practice throughout their lives," remarked Crellin when asked about what the intended take away is for the students. "That's why we hope to engage them in all these different opportunities, to try different materials and different techniques so they find what they love."

"We want to encourage kids young to love the arts, and hopefully they stick to it," she continued. "We want to see them throughout their lives coming to the Art Centre and practicing."

The Moosomin Visual Arts Centre has been a busy place since officially opening in February at 701 Ellice Street. The class calendar is chock-full with open studio time available as well. Crellin noted the painting and youth drawing classes seem to be a big hit with locals.

"They sell out immediately, it seems," she said. "So there are kids that are interested in art!"

The Moosomin Visual Arts Centre is always welcoming new faces from all places around the region—those interested in signing up for a class or perhaps people with a penchant to share their knowledge as a teacher.

For those interested in getting involved in the arts centre or signing up for the after school program, they can visit moosominvac.com for more information.

Moosomin Chamber of Commerce

Bonk to speak on CT Scanner at March 26 meeting

BY KEVIN WEEDMARK

The March meeting of the Moosomin Chamber of Commerce is set for Tuesday, March 26, 11:45 am at the Canalta Hotel meeting room. Lunch is served by the Crate House and everyone is welcome. There is lots on the agenda:

MLA Steven Bonk to speak on CT Scanner

Moosomin MLA Steven Bonk will be at the meeting to speak about the provincial budget and the plan for a CT Scanner in Moosomin.

"Our government has committed to having a CT scanner in Moosomin and working with the local community," Bonk said. "It falls outside the regular procurement process due to the fact that the Health Foundation has already raised so much money towards it. We will work towards a path forward on how we can make this work in a way that is best for the community as well as falling under the SHA requirements."

The province is working with local community leaders and the Moosomin and District Health Care Foundation to work on a framework that can work for Moosomin and potentially other communities in the future to secure a CT Scanner.

The budget includes a $5.1-million increase to expand capacity for specialized CT and MRI medical imaging services.

Play Fair Daycare update

There will be an update on plans for Play Fair Daycare's second building and the spring Smile Cookie campaign, with proceeds going toward the day care. The Daycare and Tim Hortons Moosomin's goal is to set a new record for Smile Cookie sales in Moosomin, and to have the top sales in the province again.

Last spring, Moosomin had the highest Smile Cookie sales ever for the community and the highest in the entire province, bringing in a total of $34,335.

Play Fair Daycare has received approval for 90 additional spaces, which would require a second building, and about $1 million in funding for a new building.

The day care is in discussions with the manager Sheilagh Garrett and new Housing Authority manager Teddi Taylor will provide an update on the Housing Authority and its role in the community. There have been a lot of changes in the housing authority board—Kevin Weedmark is chair, Darcy Rambold is vice-chair, and three new members are in the process of being appointed—Larry Miskiman, Darrell Light, and Glenn Wilton. The Housing Authority is responsible for 141 housing units in Moosomin, Fleming, and Wapella.

Ukrainian Community organizes new group

The local Ukrainian community is formally organizing an association for fundraising and service projects. Roman Chernykh of the Ukrainian Community will explain the plans for the group.

New businesses

A couple of new businesses will be introduced at the March Chamber meeting.

- Eddy and Jolene DeVries of Anytime Fitness will join the meeting to talk about their gym, which is now open.

- JMC Property Holdings and Services is a new business involving three partners that offers property maintenance services and has a couple of contracts for commercial buildings already.

Cenotaph Centennial

A group is working on plans for a Cenotaph Centennial event Saturday, June 8. It was 100 years ago that the Cenotaph was unveiled in Moosomin. Brian Beckett of the Cenotaph 100 Committee will update chamber members on plans for the event, and will have a sample of a commemorative miniature cenotaph that is being sold as a fundraiser for the event.

First Aid Kit Fundraiser

The Moosomin Kinettes will talk about their First Aid Kit Fundraiser and will be taking orders for First Aid Kits. They are selling a range of first aid kits.

Cell service upgrades to 5G around Moosomin

Service around border remains the same

BY RYAN KIEDROWSKI
LOCAL JOURNALISM INITIATIVE REPORTER

Cell phone coverage received a boost recently as SaskTel announced 5G services in 30 more areas around the province.

"At SaskTel, we're firmly committed to being the best at connecting our customers to the world," said Charlene Gavel, SaskTel President and CEO in a media release. "The continued rollout of our 5G network will strengthen the technological foundation of our province and help support the development of exciting innovations that have the power to transform nearly every aspect of modern life."

Currently, 5G coverage is available to more than 50 per cent of the provincial population, spanning major centres and highways plus many rural and resort communities. The 5G network boasts speeds of up to 1.2 Gigabits per second, which is anticipated to increase in the future.

Included in the announcement was an area around Moosomin now upgraded to the faster service.

"There are two cell tower sites around Moosomin, there's one off Carlton Street and there's one just west of town off of Wright Road," said Lindsay Mazenc, external communications manager with SaskTel. The Wright Road tower was actually turned up to 5G back in October while the Carlton Street tower boosted a 5G signal in February. "So residents would have noticed 5G on their phones for the last little bit."

A coverage map on the SaskTel website shows 5G along the TransCanada spanning from Red Jacket to Fleming, north almost to Welwyn and south to the Moosomin and District Regional Park. Wapella, Whitewood, Broadview and Grenfell are also 5G clusters along the highway.

The expansion of both 5G and fibre networks across Saskatchewan stems from SaskTel's financial commitment of $1.6 billion in capital over the next five years.

"Our government is pleased that more families and businesses who live and work in rural communities now have access to the same wireless network and technologies as those in our larger urban centres," said Alana Ross, MLA for Prince Albert Northcote. "The efforts being put forward by SaskTel to expand their cutting-edge wireless and fibre networks across the province will help improve the quality of life and drive economic activity in all corners of Saskatchewan."

Coverage near border stays the same

However, while the bump to 5G technology on many towers has been received graciously, some areas continue to lack coverage. People in the Welwyn area will not see a change to coverage, something that has been a great concern for some time.

"We are aware that coverage in Welwyn, and really along the Saskatchewan and Manitoba border, can be challenging at times," said Greg Jacobs, External Communications Manager with SaskTel. "Specifically with Welwyn, coverage there would be what we consider limited. Unfortunately, at this time, we don't have any plans to install a tower there any time soon."

The closest cell tower to Welwyn is located in Rocanville, and SaskTel doesn't have any plans for new construction in the foreseeable future.

"When you're installing a large cell tower, the signal will generally travel between 15 and 20 kilometres, depending on other structures or obstructions that may prevent a signal from traveling that far," said Jacobs.

This comes as frustrating news to area residents, especially since there have been rumblings of a possible tower project near Fleming three years ago. Back in 2021, SaskTel reached out to the Town of Fleming about the possibility of placing a tower in order to expand the latest technology of the time, being the 4G wireless network. Once the emerging 5G network began, the idea was scrapped with an estimated three to five year timeline tentatively placed before construction plans would be revisited.

With the close proximity to the Manitoba border, SaskTel needs to abide by certain limitations.

"What we're limited by is our license as a wireless service provider. Our spectrum licenses allow us to offer wireless service within Saskatchewan, and within Saskatchewan only," Jacobs explained. "What we must do is basically everything in our power to prevent our signals from escaping any of our borders, north, south, east or west. That puts a community like Welwyn in an awkward spot because they're so close to the border that we don't really have a good solution to offer service there without running afoul of our spectrum licenses."

Essentially, the message remains the same—we know the issue, but don't hold your breath.

"Given the current situation, we don't have a good solution today," acknowledged Jacobs. "That doesn't mean that there won't be a good solution tomorrow, and we continue to look at every opportunity, every potential to improve connectivity all across the province."

Those sentiments come as little comfort to RM of Moosomin CAO Kendra Lawrence who, while a Fleming resident, has a long distance package on her cell as the phone picks up the tower in Foxwarren, Manitoba for service.

"As the administrator for Welwyn, I spoke and phoned into SaskTel quite a few times asking about improved service over there [Welwyn] because we have first responders that are not receiving their alerts that there is an incident that they have to respond to," she explained.

Many people in the area have maintained a landline due to the lack of cell coverage, and Lawrence noted RM of Moosomin employees utilize CB radios in all equipment "to ensure the safety of the staff when they're out working along the boundary where they might be in a dead zone."

"We're struggling with 3G, so we would be content with that, and improve on it so that we could maybe get rid of the landlines," she said.

A good swath of Saskatchewan is covered by SaskTel's LTE network, which connects 99 per cent of the population according to the Crown corporation.

Fleming Pie Auction on April 5

BY RYAN KIEDROWSKI
LOCAL JOURNALISM INITIATIVE REPORTER

The annual pie auction returns to the Fleming Hall, and organizers are confident this year will be another success. "Every year is different, and it's interesting to try to figure out which is going to be the most famous pie," said Cindy Green, president of the Fleming Community Organization. "A few years ago, it was a pan of cinnamon buns that was our number one seller—I think it sold for $300!"

This year will see a return to the hybrid format, allowing people both online and in-person a chance to bid on those delicious desserts. The virtual component will kick off on March 31 at noon, wrapping April 4 at 1 pm on The Fleming Community Facebook page.

For those attending in-person, all the action kicks off on April 5 at 7 pm with skilled auctioneer Ty Cutler taking bids at lightning speed.

Going with a hybrid event also means one crucial detail: more pies on offer.

"Last year, we sold 98 pies," recalled Green. "If we did all in-person, 98 pies would take a really long time and it would probably drag out and be a little too long!"

While adding the online event makes for extra planning, the end product remains fresh and tasty.

"It takes quite a bit of organizing, but that way when people are making the pies—because volunteers make the pies around the community—that way, they can just all bring them the one day," Green explained. "And then, the next day we do the in-person auction and it's still a good fresh pie."

This largest fundraiser in Fleming all benefits the community with money going towards children's activities and hall maintenance.

"In previous years we've been really amping up our children's entertainment," Green said. "Last year, we started doing the end of school dance and it went over so well. So this year, we're going to do it again and try to make it bigger and better than previous years."

Purchasing sports equipment is another goal for the group, providing recreation options for youth.

"We're trying to bring in more sports equipment so that during the long winter months, the kids have something to do in the hall," Green said.

Last year, the pie auction brought in around $4,000 for the community, and Green says more volunteers are always welcome.

"We will accept anybody that wants to donate pies," she confirmed. "And anybody can come to the pie auction—we love seeing new faces and hope they come back!"

In our opinion:

Manitoba is fortunate to not have teacher strikes

Manitoba is an oasis of stability in the midst of teacher labor strife in Canada

Saskatchewan students are not having a good school year.

Teachers in that province are currently engaged in rotating strikes and there is a real possibility of a full teachers' strike in the near future.

The Saskatchewan Teachers' Federation wants class size and complexity clauses in their collective agreement while the province insists that this issue is best handled at the local level.

Neither side appears likely to budge, raising the spectre of an extended strike.

Sadly, labour unrest among teachers is not uncommon. In late 2023, teachers in Quebec went on strike for several weeks.

Ontario and British Columbia have also seen more than their fair of teacher strikes, with teachers in those provinces engaging in job action multiple times over the years.

Manitoba teachers' collective agreements expired in 2022. For the first time ever, bargaining is happening at the provincial level.

This means that whatever agreement is negotiated will apply to all teachers in the province.

However, significant differences remain between the two sides. The Manitoba Teachers' Society (MTS) has even accused the Manitoba School Boards Association of "contract stripping."

An impasse appears likely.

And yet, we are still not hearing any talk about a potential teachers' strike in Manitoba.

That's because MTS voluntarily gave up the right to strike in 1956. In return, MTS received the guarantee of binding arbitration as a dispute resolution mechanism.

Binding arbitration means that both sides submit their final contract proposals to an independent arbitration panel.

Using this information, the arbitrators decide on a new collective agreement, which is then binding on both sides.

There's a significant risk for both teachers and their employers since neither side knows what the panel will decide.

This creates an incentive to hammer things out at the bargaining table before arbitration.

Once it goes to arbitration, anything can happen.

Fortunately, one group that is not at risk during this process is students.

Because strikes are forbidden, schools are not likely to close because of a teachers' strike.

As a result, Manitoba is one of only two provinces (the other being Prince Edward Island) that is an oasis of stability in a sea of labour disputes.

However, we must not take this stability for granted. If MTS had its way, teachers would again have the option of going on strike.

Section 3.2(h) of the official MTS policy handbook states, "Members should have the ability to choose their dispute resolution mechanism – binding arbitration or strike."

In other words, MTS would like to renege on the deal it made with the province back in 1956.

This would be a serious mistake.

For one, strikes are harmful to students. Closing schools harms students' academic and social development, as we clearly saw during the extended COVID-19 school closures.

The last thing students need is more time away from school.

In addition, binding arbitration has gotten superior results for teachers.

Not only do Manitoba teachers not have to worry about losing pay due to extended strikes, but their current salaries and benefits are similar to what teachers in other provinces currently receive.

Manitoba is fortunate not to have teacher strikes.

Let's hope that the province and MTS see the wisdom in preserving the labour peace we've had since 1956.

Maybe one day this job will feel like actual work . . .

I love my job because every single day I get a lot of work done, I get to work with great people, I learn something new, and I have fun.

Wednesday was no exception as I headed into the Legislature for the Budget Speech. The Minister of Rural and Remote Health was prepared to talk about the CT Scanner for Moosomin after the budget.

Our brilliant young reporter Ashley came with me, as she had done some reporting last summer that helped bring the CT Scanner issue to prominence. She wrote an article on Levi Jamieson's contribution to the CT Scanner Fund in the hope that it would help in the future in a case like his. The day after that article came out we interviewed the then-minister of Rural and Remote Health, Everett Hindley, and he committed in that interview to come out to tour the Southeast Integrated Care Centre and find out more about the need for a CT Scanner for the Moosomin Region.

"I'm always very encouraged to see when an individual such as Levi has decided to also become part of this and throw their support behind this initiative—not just in terms of that support but doing so in financial means as well. So a very gracious thank-you to Levi for what he's done now for this particular project and the support he's thrown behind it," were Hindley's exact words to us. And the day after that, we spoke with Premier Scott Moe. His exact words were "I think all will be inspired by the dedication and drive that a young guy like Levi has in already fundraising for a valuable service like the CT Scanner. It will be looked at in the due course of the budgeting process of the government and the SHA."

Wednesday's budget includes a $5.1-million increase to expand capacity for specialized CT and MRI medical imaging services, thanks in part to Levi's efforts and Ashley's reporting in getting the CT Scanner onto the agenda.

The fun thing about going to the legislature is seeing lots of people you know. On this trip we ran into a bunch of teachers from Moosomin, Rocanville, and Wapella who were protesting outside the Legislature.

Inside, one person told me it was like running a gauntlet to get through the protesting teachers. I responded that for me it wasn't like running the gauntlet in a negative sense, it was like running the gauntlet to get to the post office or the credit union without stopping to chat with 15 people. Through the day we spoke with Moosomin MLA Steven Bonk, his assistant Garry Beckett, Cannington MLA Darryl Harrison, former Cannington MLA Dan D'Autremont who sat near us on the floor of the Chamber for the budget speech, Sheila Sterling, former publisher of the Redvers Optimist who runs the speakers office and got us seats on the floor, STF vice-president Nathan Bromm, Minister of Rural and Remote Health Tim McLeod and NDP MLA Trent Wotherspoon, who gave the opposition response to the budget. I introduced Ashley to him and told her he is the smartest guy on the NDP side of the house. He responded that he didn't want to know where I rank him out of all 61 MLAs. I don't know if he picked up on the fact that I said he was the smartest "guy" on the NDP side, so not divulging where he ranks compared to his leader, Carla Beck . . .

Kevin Weedmark

The World-Spectator was represented at the budget speech at the Legislature by Kevin Weedmark and Ashley Bochek.

So, like every day, I got a lot of work done, talked to some great people, learned a few new things, and had some fun!

Maybe one day this job will feel like actual work, but I haven't got to that point yet!

Big Six Final Moosomin up 2-0 over Rockets Game 3 this Monday in Redvers

In a thrilling overtime game that saw Drew Schiller score the winning goal for the Rangers last Thursday during Game 2 in Moosomin, the Moosomin Rangers took a 2-0 lead in the Big Six Final over the Redvers Rockets last week.

That leaves the Rockets fighting for survival as the series heads into Game 3 in Redvers this Monday, March 25 at 8 pm.

If the Rockets pull out a win on Monday, Game 4 is set for Moosomin on Wednesday at 8 pm and Game 5 is set for Redvers on Thursday at 8 am.

Game 2 was hard fought, with no scoring taking place in the first period. In the second period Daylin Smallchild scored the first goal of the game for the Rockets early in the period. Josh Elmes followed with a goal for the Rangers, followed by a Kenton Miller goal for the Rockets, all within the first four minutes of that period.

With the Rockets leading 2-1 heading into the third period, Monty Driver tied the game for the Rangers, but the Rockets went up 3-2 with a Preston Kopeck goal. Bud Holloway tied the game with a Rangers goal at 17:29, pushing the game into overtime where Drew Schiller broke the tie only 28 seconds into the period.

SEHL Final Tigers taking on Cobras in final

The Rocanville Tigers are taking on the Canora Cobras in the Sask East Hockey League final.

Canora has home ice advantage in the best-of-five series, with Game 1 taking place last Friday in Canora, and Game 2 taking place last Saturday in Rocanville. Dates for Game 3-5 had not been set as of press time last week.

The Cobras defeated the Swan Valley Axemen to move on to the final after taking that series to a full five games with two overtime wins for the Cobras and an overtime win for the Axemen.

The Tigers and Cobras both finished at the top of their division standings during the regular season, each with a 13-1 record and 26 points.

The Tiger Hills Hockey League final between the Minnitiota-Elkhorn C-Hawks and the Killarney Shamrocks got underway on the weekend, with Game 1 taking place in Killarney on Saturday and Game 2 taking place in Hamiota on Sunday.

Game 3 of the best-of-five series is set for this Wednesday, March 27 in Killarney at 8 pm.

If needed, Game 4 will be this Saturday, March 30 in Virden at 7 pm, and Game 5 will be this Sunday, March 31 in Killarney at 6 pm.

Harpauer delivers last budget as finance minister

BY RYAN KIEDROWSKI
LOCAL JOURNALISM INITIATIVE REPORTER

After 17 years serving as an MLA in the Humboldt-Watrous constituency, Minister of Finance since 2017 and the Deputy Premier for the last four years, Donna Harpauer delivered her final budget last week. She's one of 10 sitting MLAs not seeking re-election this year.

Surrounded by not only her colleagues in the Saskatchewan Party, but also friends and family members (including a grandchild just eight days old), Harpauer took a breath and began her budget presentation.

"It is my honour today to present the 2024/25 Saskatchewan budget, our government's 17th budget and my seventh budget as Finance Minister," she said on the afternoon of March 20.

The $19.9 billion revenue forecast for the 2024-25 Budget is up $184.2 million from last year. The increase is primarily due to growth in all revenue categories, except non-renewable resources largely due to the moderation of potash prices.

Total expense is projected at $20.1 billion in the 2024-25 Budget, an increase of $1.5 billion, or 7.9 per cent, over last year's budget.

The 2024-25 Budget has a projected deficit of $273.2 million, but is expected to return to a surplus position in 2025-26 due to increasing revenues driven by a growing population, labour force and economy.

The 2024-25 Budget supports students and teachers through a record investment of $3.3 billion for the Ministry of Education, up 8.1 per cent over last year's budget. This is an increase of $247.8 million to support Prekindergarten to Grade 12 students, early learning, child care and libraries.

Saskatchewan's 27 school divisions will receive $2.2 billion in school operating funding for the 2024-25 school year—a record increase of $180.0 million, or an 8.8 per cent increase over the previous year.

The budget provides the Saskatchewan Health Authority with nearly $4.7 billion, including an operating increase of $248.3 million, or a 5.6 per cent increase compared to last year.

The 2024-25 Budget includes an increase of $5.1 million for specialized medical imaging services to add essential CT and MRI capacity in the province.

The World-Spectator spoke with Harpauer after the budget last week:

This was the last budget that you presented. What were your thoughts in that moment, as you were presenting that last budget?

I did not allow my mind to go to the fact that this is the last budget, so I wouldn't get sentimental. I just thought, 'I'm delivering the budget, just like always,' and I'll let that all sink in once I get done the whole circuit afterwards; that this is indeed the last budget. I wish it was balanced, but I do feel very confident and comfortable with what we chose to do.

When you've got a growing province, which we do, then you've got more kids in classrooms, you've got more people needing health care, so you've got to step up and address that, and be there for those. But what is exciting is when you've got a growing province, and you've got some pretty substantive investments committed to our province. The economy going forward will be critical, and I think it will happen to support those higher expenditures.

The title of your budget is "Classrooms, Care & Communities." How do you think this budget will affect change in general for our province over the next year?

All of those things, and another thing investors look at is quality of life for their workers, right? So we need to attract those workers, and in order to do so we have to have the quality of life that they need—education for the kids health care for their family members. So it's not one thing that fixes everything, it is the whole package.

So I think going forward, it's going to affect the province in that having that there will attract even more investment, and attracting even more investment means more revenue for the province to maintain and sustain what we've got. It becomes self-sustaining going forward, and that's going to be really critical.

DONNA HARPAUER
DEPUTY PREMIER & MINISTER OF FINANCE

I remember from your comments yesterday, we're starting in a deficit position, but you're anticipating ending on a positive note, and you made reference to the resource industry as playing a huge role in that positive growth.

It truly does, it plays a massive amount and I'm hoping that the next finance minister uses it towards that! But you know, as you have more people, you have more people buying stuff, and that means more PST.

The construction we're going to see this summer is going to be exciting. Those are fairly high-paying jobs in our trades, and so then you've got higher income tax being paid. It all ends up sustaining itself.

As you touched on construction, in the Moosomin area, we have a pretty big boom going on—$52 million in the area alone in construction. What in the budget, going forward, do you think will encourage that rural growth in communities?

Just talking to different investors and that I do have the privilege of meeting with, what they look for is, as I said, they want to look at, basically, tax stability. They want to know if they're going to invest millions—and I've got BHP in my area with the big potash mine—if they're going to invest those kinds of dollars, they want to know that the government is stable; that it's not going to quickly turn on a dime and start raising taxes because they have to do their business plan based on the tax regime that they're going to invest into. So that's why all of that becomes very critical and not everybody knows that it goes beyond just having the feedstock you need for what you want to do.

You've got to have a stable business environment before they're going to make a massive investment.

It must be difficult to hammer out a budget when everybody's ask is so important.

Everybody just assumes that there's a ton of money out there that they can get!

After 17 years, how do you think you're leaving the books? Do you think you're leaving Saskatchewan finances better than when you first came in?

What I think I will be able to have pride in is that there's stability. Keeping in mind I was the Finance Minister through a pandemic, where basically the economy was shut down. So we had that massive swing. I was the Finance Minister when we had the largest catastrophic drought in agriculture, which is a huge industry in our province. So I got to live through that swing. But now that I'm projecting a more normal year, the foundation of our budget's solid, and we have three revenue sources—we've got taxes, we've got resource revenue, and we have transfers on the federal government, which of course, they can do because they collect taxes from us as well.

We need to base our expenses a very limited amount on the resource revenue, because resource revenues go up and down. It's so volatile. So I want to keep budgets—and I've really stressed that with my government colleagues—of less than 15 per cent to be reliant on resource revenue. And above that, we need to invest it somewhere else than a one-time spend and I've been able to basically entrench that into our psyche. And happy to note in this budget, only 13.5 per cent of the expenses are paid for by resource revenues, so that when resource revenues go down, you're not devastated. You're not scrambling for where the money's going to come from.

I think overall, we're positioned with our resource sector and everything taken into account, we're on the cusp of something huge.

I couldn't agree with you more!

One statistic that was mentioned yesterday was that you've delivered the most budgets by a single provincial Finance Minister in 60 years—what is your thought on that?

Someone asked me 'how many budgets this?' and I didn't know! Well, now I know—seven that's crazy! But I loved it. I really do. I've loved this position, it's been such an honour to have had the confidence of my government on keeping me here.

So what does life after politics look like?

I don't know. I said to some people, the first thing I'm going to do is read a book that's meaningless, that I do not have to memorize it, analyze it, or fix the problem! And after that, I'll find something. I don't know what it is, but I can't see myself just doing nothing.

Rocanville Town Council

Rocanville pinpoints top projects

BY RYAN KIEDROWSKI

LOCAL JOURNALISM INITIATIVE REPORTER

While a smaller agenda found its way to the table, Rocanville Town Council met on March 20—a mere week after their last gathering. Last Wednesday's meeting brought Council back to their regular schedule for the rest of the year—barring future weather events!

Following are a few items of discussion that came before Council.

Top three projects identified

Council had a first look at the draft budget, targeting three big projects for the coming year.

At the top of the list is the revitalized swimming pool that everyone in town is eager to see work taking place on.

"Another one is a water treatment plant distribution header project," explained Town Administrator Tanya Strandlund. "We're going to do some replacing of aging infrastructure there."

That work is a proactive approach, researching material costs and a general idea of what the ballpark price tag could look like for the project.

A third focus is on a drainage plan, enabling ditches to flow properly.

Dust control

The town awarded dust control work to Virden business Clark's Contracting & Maintenance. The crew will apply Tiger Calcium Premium 35 Blend in an effort to reduce dust around town.

Money invested into GIC

Council approved the investment of $20,000 into a GIC.

Moosomin MLA Steven Bonk:

'Our government is committed to having a CT Scanner in Moosomin'

BY ASHLEY BOCHEK
AND KEVIN WEEDMARK

Moosomin MLA Steven Bonk said he is excited about the prospect of a CT Scanner for the Moosomin region.

"I'm extremely excited about the CT scanner coming to Moosomin," he told the World-Spectator following the provincial budget Wednesday. "Our government has committed to having a CT scanner in Moosomin and working with the local community. It falls outside the regular procurement process due to the fact that the Health Foundation has already raised so much money towards it. We will work towards a path forward on how we can make this work in a way that is best for the community as well as falling under the SHA requirements."

"At this stage, what we're looking at, is the community or the Health Care Foundation, or an interested party, would purchase and run the CT business. SHA is looking at buying or contracting CT scans from that private company and staffing it with SHA workers."

Bonk said it could be a problem having the CT Scanner within the Southeast Integrated Care Centre if the company that owns it wants to provide private scans.

"It could be a problem and we're looking at that now," he said. "That's one of the things that we're not exactly sure of yet because there are some concerns around the unionized and non-unionized workers and Collective Bargaining Agreements. But we know it's in the best interests of the people of Saskatchewan to have a CT scanner in Moosomin and especially to have it in the hospital so that it will dovetail nicely with the air ambulance, for example, for stroke victims and trauma victims."

"We're looking at all options at the moment and we've asked the community to come forward with a business proposal. With that, the Ministry of Health will look at that and decide what is the best way to move forward with this project, but we are committed to working with the community

Bonk says government committed to CT Scanner

Moosomin MLA Steven Bonk told World-Spectator reporter Ashley Bochek that the provincial government is committed to bringing a CT Scanner to Moosomin.

mostly to make sure that a CT scan does end up in Moosomin."

Bonk said the government had to come up with a creative solution for Moosomin.

"Moosomin is not completely compliant with some of the requirements of the SHA for a CT Scanner. This proposal, which comes from the Moosomin Health Care Foundation, in conjunction with the doctors in Moosomin, falls outside our normal process."

"So that's why we're trying to make a framework, so that if other communities in Saskatchewan have fundraising efforts and they want to place some sort of diagnostic imaging equipment in their community, this way we can work with SHA to identify the needs in that area instead of health foundations going off on their own and deciding what they need. If they can collaborate with the SHA I think we could have a much better, much more efficient system."

"This isn't unusual where communities are raising money on their own for this equipment, we're trying to make a framework like I mentioned, so that the communities, before they decide what to buy, they're talking with SHA to make sure that it's needed in that area. That was a bit of a concern, we didn't want to set a precedent where Moosomin said that they wanted a CT scanner so the Health Foundation went out and bought one and then the SHA says, 'Oh, but we could've used this more.' We need to make sure that we're doing everything as efficiently and as helpful to the province as we can."

"This proposal came together by the good work of Dr. Wessel Roets, the Moosomin Health Foundation, Bill McPherson, Mayor Larry Tomlinson and the Community Builders' Alliance. This has been a long time coming but we've worked really well together and with the SHA, and in particular the ministers in the Ministries of Health and of Rural and Remote Health to make sure that this happens. A lot of people did a lot of work behind the scenes for a long time to get to where we are today."

"They were just excellent to work with. I have to give them credit because they didn't let this die either. They worked when I didn't even know that they were working on it. So I really appreciate their efforts."

Bonk said Moosomin will be a pilot project for a framework that could be rolled out across the province.

"Speaking with the minister yesterday when we had a meeting with all of the partners in Moosomin, he indicated they do want to use us more as a pilot project, because this is the first of this particular situation to happen and it's going to be in Moosomin. So they have a vested interest in making sure that this is a success so we want to make sure that we have all of the pieces in place and that we're working with the local community and the local organizations, with SHA and the Ministry of Health to make sure that this is successful."

He said the plan was welcomed by community leaders.

"We had a productive meeting. I think everyone was very happy that this project is going ahead. We're still working out some details of the process of how it will happen and what exactly the model will be, but the fact that our government has committed to making this work, I think was well received by everyone."
