Three quarters of municipal funding for airport expansion now committed

BY KEVIN WEEDMARK

Moosomin's airport expansion project is getting closure to completion, with most towns, villages, and RMs committing their share of funding for the project.

There has been a multi-year, multimillion dollar effort to expand the airport with a new 5,000-foot runway to accommodate the Saskatchewan Air Ambulance, as well as commercial interests.

The new runway will be the third lon-est in the province, after Saskatoon and gest III. Regina.

So far, $6,456,111.57 has been spent on the project, but the total cost including paving, lights, and navigation will be $10,589,058.64.

Nutrien and the provincial government have each contributed about 25 per cent of the total cost

The airport expansion committee was looking for local municipalities and local corporate donors to up their commitment to make up the $4.2 million shortfall.

Local municipalities have committed

$2.016.130 toward the expansion of the Moosomin airport, and another $724,600

"When the amount increased with inflation and the project ended up being higher than we were anticipating back six years ago, we started looking at the formula," said RM of Moosomin Reeve Dave Moffatt.

Moffatt said it was great to see the town

Moffatt said it was great to see the town of Moosomin's commitment of more than $900,000 to the project this fall.

"It's huge. The other communities were waiting for Moosomin to be on board. Everybody knows the importance of what this project is going to bring to the community and surrounding area, and having the town of Moosomin make a commitment to contribute their share helps a lot.
"The municipalities have been really

"The municipalities have been really good about paying their share. Now there are the corporate and private donations that are going to need to come in to match this," he said.

"We're hoping that when this article gets out, the corporates and privates will see the municipalities are contributing their share and will say, 'Okay, these guys are stepping up and now it's our turn to.'"

Most communities have met $350 PER CAPITA COMMITMENT

While most municipalities have met the $350 per capita requested, some communi-

The town of Rocanville responded to the request by noting that they will consider the funding as they work on their 2024 budget, and the airport committee has not met directly with some of the other councils.

"There are still some communities that "There are still some communities that are on the list that we haven't had the opportunity to speak with directly yet," said Kendra Lawrence, CAO of the RM of Moosomin. "We have been working through." those meetings."

Lawrence said there have been some questions from municipalities.

"There have definitely been questions about where we are at, project-wise. There was a lot of concern around the total dollar

"There was some concern over where it's gone from six years ago," said Moffatt.
"I think we've answered and shown why that was—we've been fairly up front."

Moffatt says the commitment from the municipalities makes it easier to approach businesses for support.

"Talking with a member of our fundraising committee, this will be greatly usable to go to them with a cover page and a one-pager and break it down and show them this is where it's at and this is what we need to finish. He feels that it will be matching dollars that will flow in fairly quick," he said.

"It's that proof that the municipalities are behind it that was needed before any corporate or private sponsorships really started to flow in," added Lawrence.

The construction schedule will depend on how funds flow in from this point.

"It could be pavement and lighting that could possibly happen at the same time. If not, then we would focus our attenin not, then we would locus our attention on the pavement and make sure that that's done first next year," said Lawrence.
"We're looking at a February/March tender so it would be very nice to see that we have the financial commitments from mu-nicipalities, corporate and private spon-sorships and that there would be enough sorsings and that there would be enough to then put the tenders out at that time because we would hope that we'd get the best pricing and availability of contractors being that early in the year to have that paving tender put out."

The RM may borrow to do some of the work before all of the committed funds are in place. "It will have to be discussed with council yet, but I think that will be our next step just the way that some of them have shown that they'll be coming in," said Moffatt.

"Most are within a year to two years and the Town of Moosomin's is five and we completely understand the necessity of that," added Lawrence. "With these of that," added Lawrence. "With these contribution commitments and letters, contribution commitments and letters, it will definitely help to go forward with borrowing the funds to the Saskatchewan Municipal Board because they look at how you would repay your loan and so this is laying that format out for them."
"It's huge having a letter of intent showing that this will be met," said Moffatt. Moffatt said it's great to be in the final stages of the airport expansion project.
"It will be unbelievable to finish this project and to move onto our next step of the CT scanner. As Dr. Van has done in presentations and shown the importance of it, it's huge. To finish this and to move of it, it's huge. To finish this and to move on is going to be great."

"There is a true connection between having a paved, lit airport and that grand possibility of having that CT scanner come to our area," said Lawrence. "It's just one more thing to show that our community is growing in the right direction—the whole area is growing in the right direction."

How much work has gone into this project to get it to this point?

"It's been an unimaginable amount of hours and time, meetings and a lot of items that are behind the scenes of the construction, the actual physical construc-tion of the airport," said Lawrence. "A lot of people wouldn't believe the amount of time that it's taken to complete and keep the details in order and in the right time frame—everything in regards to Transport Canada, RNAV, all of that and making sure that we were hitting those timelines so that when we were able to do the earth work construction and that it didn't hold it up and make it unusable for a year because we didn't have the Transport Canada and RNAV complete. Jeff St Onge was very instrumental in that with knowing those regulations, applications and that

"It's been a lot of work just keeping things rolling so that it doesn't get forgot-ten about and people don't feel like they're not getting the information," added Mof-fatt. "That was huge."

"And we're always open to a conversation. If there's anybody out there that wishes to have a conversation with myself or David, please reach out," added Law-

"I'd sooner answer some questions than hear about speculation or people being

Work in 2024

Lawrence says she's optimistic most of the remaining work can be completed next

"If we can go ahead with our paving in 2024—and I'm very positive that we'll be able to do the electrical at the same time it would be done and installed before the end of the construction season of 2024."

Chamber of Commerce helping to fill Christmas hampers for Moosomin Food Share:

Chamber Food Drive on until December 9

BY RYAN KIEDROWSKI LOCAL IOURNALISM INITIATIVE REPORTER

The Moosomin Chamber Commerce Christmas Food Drive is on now until December 9.

Chamber members will be collecting food for the Moosomin Food Share Moosomin Food Share Christmas Hampers. The Food Share says donations are down this year and demand is up, so the Chamber wants to help fill the hampers for Christ-mas. Food donations can be dropped off at Glasser's TV Service, Celebration Ford, Andrew Agencies or the World-Spectator.

The chamber came up with the plan after hearing from the Food Share at the October chamber meeting.

Samantha Campbell, Food Share manager, gave the Chamber an update of what they're facing.

"Primarily, it's a situation felt all across the country—a higher need and a decrease in donations," she said. "In the last year, we have more than doubled our clients. For the month of October, 2022, we had 19 hampers. This October, we had 45 hampers and two emergency hampers."

Campbell foresees Christmas hampers being at least in the 55-60 range this year.

"One of the reasons that we get why our clients tell us they are accessing the Food Share is the prices of groceries," Campbell explained.

Rising food costs have also impacted the Food Share's ability to purchase groceries.

range of April to October of 2022 where they spent $5,000 on groceries.

In that same timeframe this year, the cost rose to nearly $14,000.

The perishable groceries in the recent Thanksgiving hampers alone were over new programs the Food Share has initiated, including the fact that they are now also a pet food bank.

She also explained the Backpacks for Children program, which already has 10 children accessing a backpack full of food to last them the weekend," Campbell said, adding that the program has 20 spaces sponsored for the year.

The newest project at the Food Share is a meal subscription service, which is open to everyone in the community.

Subscribers can access three meals per week at a cost of $55 for two people and $97 for four people. Campbell noted that all groceries are purchased lo-cally, and a small profit is created from the program which is then donated back into the community.

MacLeod School reaches $130,000 in gift card sales

BY RYAN KIEDROWSKI

LOCAL JOURNALISM INITIATIVE REPORTER

MacLeod Elementary School is a large step closer to making their dream of a new all-inclusive playground a reality. Another highly-successful School Committee Council gift card drive has wrapped with an estimated $130,000 in gift card sales.

"A big portion of that shout-out would go to Celebra-tion Ford, they did $24,000-plus in gift cards and Hebert Grain Ventures was another really big supporter of that as well," said an excited Tammy Cole, Principal at MacLeod Elementary School.

As the gift cards are for local businesses, money remains in the area to further bolster the immediate economy. Another trend noticed was the amount of businesses using the gift cards as a Christmas bonus for their employees.

"Everything's local, so all of the money stays local,
"Everything's local, so all of the money stays local, Cole said. "The SCC gets about $9,000 out of that profit to turn into things that they can do to support the school's Learning Plan

A portion of those profits will be devoted to the playground fund, which will update the well-loved equipment currently at the school.

We want to make it an inclusive playground so that all children and all people of all ages can access it. It's something we don't really have in our community and so that's why we really are trying to push for that dream to happen," explained Cole. "Plus, our old structure is starting to need to be changed. We can't replace some of the things on it, it's just starting to really age out."

There's also a method to the timing of the gift card campaign as the Christmas season approaches.

"The timing of it's purposeful because we hope that they buy the gift cards and then kick off when we're doing the Moonlight Madness," Cole said, noting that getting the gift cards out in student led conferences coincides with a week leading up to Moonlight Madness.

"So we try to really time it so that those are out right before the holidays, when people are doing holiday shopping."

Now in it's third year, the gift card campaign continuous the year was a land over the year. ues to see not only sales increase by $13,000 over the year previous, but more businesses are also coming on board

It takes a huge team effort to run the fundraiser with SCC members distributing the initial letters to businesses, then students selling the gift cards, plus all the behindthe-scenes work.

"Here in the office, our admin assistants and my VP and myself, we sort and count and recount - even to get and myself, we sort and count and recount - even to get the totals to go to the business of the number of cards, everything has to be impeccably done," Cole explained. "That's $130,000 worth of cards that we're sorting!" Excitement among students is also brewing as there are prizes to be won including movie theatre passes, Mooso-min Bucks, and 15 DQ Blizzard coupons. Moosomin town council:

Town saves thousands as housing authority deficit lower

BY KEVIN WEEDMARK
The town of Moosomin has saved thousands of dollars as the town's share of the Moosomin Housing Authority deficit came in at less than 10 per cent of the budgeted figure. The town budgeted $7,000 for its five per cent share of the housing authority deficit, but the town's share came in at only $647.07.

The town of Moosomin has a five per cent share of the Housing Authority, with the remaining own-ership lying with the federal and provincial governments.

Because of that the town is responsible for five per cent of the deficit in years when the housing author-ity has a deficit, and receives five per cent of the net income in years when the housing authority makes money.

"Based on the financial operations of the Moosooperations of the Mooso-min Housing Authority, the town's five per cent share of the operating loss for 2022 is $647.07," Roger Parenteau, Executive Di-rector of the Saskatchewan Housing Authority wrote to the town. "We are also providing you with the estimated 2023 municipal settlement for your budget planning."

The estimate for the town's share of the 2023 deficit, payable in 2024, is only $140.74.

The Moosomin Housing Authority currently is at a zero per cent vacancy rate, an extreme rarity in the province.

Kipling renews paperclip trademark

Kipling Town Council held their regular meeting on November 13. At that meeting, council decided to renew the trademark for the red paperclip that made the community famous. The total cost of the renewal is $3,500 for the next 10 years, barring any changes to the 13 classes associated with the trademark. Initially filed back in 2006, the trademark was officially registered in 2009 after some "legal back and forth."

Mayor Patricia Jackson noted how people continue to associate the brand with Kipling as she recounted reaction to the branded pin she wears.

"People still come up to me and say, 'that's the town with the red paperclip' and they're wildly excited," she

"In the wintertime, I would say probably weekly. It is just amazing the amount of people that come to town and stop and get their picture taken with the with the clip."

Moosomin topping Holiday Smile Cookie sales

"I would say our Moosomin location is kind of on the radar because we've always been in that top 10, top five tier, which is great," said Greg Crisanti, owner of the Moosomin Tim Horton's.

Just moments after the news of being so close to the top sales spot went out, Crisanti had something even more exciting to share. "Nutrien has picked up $1,000 worth of

Holiday Smile cookies for their staff," he said. "It's going to be a huge help and a bump for our community."

The final numbers of the cookie campaign haven't been tabulated as the fundraiser was still ongoing at press time. However, effective Nov. 15 (the third day of cookie sales), Crisanti noted $5,421 was raised so far for the Moosomin Family Re-

"We couldn't be more happy with the success," Crisanti said. "And again, it's a credit back to our community, the voluncredit back to our community, the volun-teers, and of course everyone that's actu-ally picking up a cookie. It's a crazy week, but it's exciting and with everything else going on during the holiday season. We sure enjoy it a lot and we're having we're having a ton of fun."

In our opinion:

Global Affairs Minister's vision falls short of protecting our sovereignty

Joly's foreign policy approach will not protect Canada's sovereignty

Having once led the government's foreign policy unit, I paid particular attention to Global Affairs Minister Melanie Joly's October 30 speech on the topic in Toronto. Correctly diagnosing an increasingly dangerous world, she outlined a shift in foreign policy centred on two sound new principles: protecting our sovereignty and conducting pragmatic diplomacy.

Unfortunately, her emphasis on defending the corroded "rules-based global order" won't actually advance those principles.

Greater self-reliance is the medicine Canada would actually need.
Protecting our sovereignty has to start with a sober assessment of our current level of commitment. Compared to the U.S. defence budget of nearly $900 billion, or 3.5 percent of GDP, Canada spends just under $37 billion, 1.3 percent of GDP. Despite pressures to do more, we get away with it because of our lucky geographic location. But dependency is a double-edged sword with benefits and risks.

America's $1.7 trillion federal budget deficit is adding to an increasdouble-edged sword with benefits and risks.

America's $1.7 trillion federal budget deficit is adding to an increasingly unsustainable $33 trillion national debt. Interest payments alone are set to exceed defence spending soon. Assistance packages for Ukraine, Israel and Taiwan are adding up. Wars cost trillions more.

Canada has its own $43 billion federal budget deficit and $1.3 trillion.

debt. But if the U.S. security umbrella were to diminish under the weight of financial strain, we would be forced to spend much more to defend our massive geographical space, extensive coastlines, widely dispersed population, and critical infrastructure.

The promised Canadian defence policy update will fall short if it doesn't address this dependency risk.

Taking greater responsibility for ourselves would mean prioritizing domestic and continental defence. Our current naval and air assets cannot adequately protect our homeland. Planned procurements will help if we can overcome delays. New surface vessels will be useful for coastal patrol, ice-breaking, and rescue. But they'll likely be sitting ducks in any future

Likewise, our $39 billion commitment to upgrade NORAD over two decades, though helpful, will be insufficient. It focuses primarily on improving sensors, strengthening command and control, and buying air-to-air missiles for yet-to-be-acquired F-35 stealth fighter jets, costing another

Protecting our sovereignty will require getting over our allergy to mis-sile defence. It would mean a NORAD-Plus initiative to build up "iron dome" anti-missile and cyber defence systems to defend our vulnerable cities, ports, power grids, communications and other critical infrastrucfor deterrence, we would need to muscle up with fleets of long- and short-range missiles and drones situated on all three coasts, combined with satellite guidance systems and advanced cyber and robotic capabilities. As for Arctic sovereignty, the Northwest Passage is viewed as international waters by the U.S. and others. Though we disagree, co-operation will be the only option if it becomes a viable global shipping route. Joly's second principle, taking a pragmatic approach to foreign policy, would mean focusing more on core national interests than on trying to shared the world. Our prinary interest by for its and always will be so yould mean focusing more on core national interests than on trying to change the world. Our primary interest by far is, and always will be, managing the relationship with the U.S., including border security. But we should strive to increase global exports of, and investments in, such key assets as energy, minerals, agrifood, building products, and so on.

Accelerating LNG exports to Asia, for example, would directly benefit us. Reducing red tape, including our overuse of trade sanctions, would, too. Though alliance solidarity is sacrosanct, our interests are actually better served, not by striking heroic 'me-too' military poses, but by avoiding foreign entanglements, as we did in Iraq. Training is an appropriate level of commitment. But being prepared to offer dispute mediation assistance before considering military participation would help, too.

Regarding development assistance, pragmatism would mean reassessing bilateral projects and directing more of our nearly $7 billion annual foreign aid to such essentials as food aid, emergency relief and peace support. A pragmatic approach to immigration might mean pausing new applications, except for students, refugees and temporary workers, until we can clear the current backlog, improve our processes, and allow the housing sector to catch up—none of which will be achieved by the government's October 31 plan, "An Immigration System for Canada's Future" and the rush to reach $50,000 newcomers annually.

In sum, protecting our sovereignty and pursuing pragmatic foreign

In sum, protecting our sovereignty and pursuing pragmatic foreign policy are sound principles. But trying to rescue the rules-based global order, rather than changing ourselves, is status quo for Canada. It took 9/11 to shock us into action over border security. Let's hope it doesn't take an attack on our soil to make us see the necessity of greater self-reliance.

Day care boards in Moosomin, Esterhazy have a lot of work ahead of them

It was incredible news for both Moosomin and Esterhazy when the provincial government announced a week ago that it would fund 90 new day care spaces in Moosomin and 60 in Esterhazy.

Those new spots come with capital funding of $10,000 per spot, so $900,000 for a new day care in Moosomin and $600,000 for a new day care in Esterhazy.

Now the hard work begins for the day care boards in both Moosomin and Esterhazy.

Where will the new day care centres be located, will the new buildings be owned by the day cares or leased, how quickly can new facilities be established, will there be a fundraising campaign to try to raise the rest of the cost of a new building, or will there be a private public partnership with local business owners or developers, or will the day cares be paying down a mortgage?

There is a lot of work for both groups to do as they go about getting a new day care established in the case of Esterhazy, and a second building for Play Fair Daycare established in the case of Moosomin.

They will need to get their communities behind

They will need to get their communities behind them as they establish these new spaces. No doubt that will happen, and one hurdle to further growth in our communities will be overcome.

Federal policies falling apart

There has been a lot of talk about the federal car-bon tax over the last few weeks. With the exemption for home heating oil aimed at the Atlantic provinces, there have been calls from across the country for the exemption to be extended, and Saskatchewan's government is the one brave enough to put forward leg-islation to stop collecting the carbon tax on natural gas starting January 1.
Polls show virtually no one is in line with the federal government's position that the carbon tax needs to continue to be increased, and a majority want at least home heating exempted if not the entire carbon tax done away with.

tax done away with.

The government painted itself into a corner by creating an exemption for one group of voters from an increasingly unpopular tax. Polls show the vast majority of Canadians believe the carve-out was done for political reasons, and believe the carbon tax has absolutely no impact on the climate. Last week a Federal Court judge dealt a blow to a federal law that banned single-use plastics (not all of them, mostly just straws, take out containers and the them, mostly just straws, take out containers and the bags you used to fill with all the single-use plastic wrapped packages from stores) is unconstitutional. The federal government stretched the truth as thin as a string of dental floss by claiming it had jurisdiction because all plastic is toxic, and harmful. The judge ruled that Ottawa went too far in characterizing plastic items as toxic in the Canadian Environmental Protection Act tured products as harmful. Furlanetto wrote that the government "acted outside of their authority," adding "there is no reasonable apprehension" that all listed plastic manufactured items are harmful.

With the plastic ban ruled unconstitutional and the carbon tax on the ropes, it sounds like a few signature policies of the current federal government are unravelling.

Shriners fundraising legacy continues

BY RYAN KIEDROWSKI
LOCAL JOURNALISM INITIATIVE REPORTER
It was another wildly successful fundraiser for the Moosomin Shrine Club on Nov. 10 at the Moosomin Conexus Centre, highlighted with entertainment courtesy JJ Voss and his Damn Good Band, Lachlan Neville and the Kelly Brothers.

Before the entertainment hit the stage, Moosomin Shire president Leo Ilustrisimo shone the spotlight on a few families the club has assisted recently in their journeys through the medical system.

Illustrisimo first spoke of the David and Trina Marcus family, who the Shriners were able to help send their daughter, Riley, to a specialist at the Shriners Hospital in Montreal.

Montreal.

"We first met Riley in May of 2023," Illustrisimo explained. "We were approached by Mrs. Megan McMillan, because they were in need of a wagon to transport one of the students. We found out that Riley had Prader-Willi syndrome, which is a deletion in the Chromosome 15, which her body does not process the nutrients from the food that she needs."

He noted that at the time the Shringer were approached.

He noted that at the time the Shriners were approached, Riley was feeling very weak and lethargic.

"The teachers approached us if we would be interested in donating a special wagon for Riley and of course, our Shriners, we did our best to accommodate that request," Ilustrisimo said.

The Shane and Nicolette McMullan family also received help from the Shriners for their sons Calloway and Liam. Ilustrisimo explained that the club first met the Mcmul-

Ilustrisimo explained that the club first met the Mcmul-lan's in 2019 when the Shriners were able to send Callo-way to the Shriners Hospital in Chicago in 2020. "Then a couple years later, Liam was born and he had the same condition as his brother," Ilustrisimo said. "He had a cleft palate and in May, 2022, both Calloway and Liam had to go to Toronto Sick Kids hospital for a surgery and we did our best to help this young family."

Ilustrisimo explained how expenses incurred by the families during hospital visits are paid for by the Wa Wa Shrine Patient Transportation Fund. This covers costs such as accommodations or airfare, which can be quite costly for families seeking treatment.

"We maintain constant communication with all these families, inviting them to our meetings and activities," Il-ustrisimo said. "And we keep in touch with them all the time. If there's a need will arise, the Shriners are here to Levi Jamieson's storyOne family was on-hand to share their experience with how the Shriners helped them navigate the hospital system. Levi Jamieson was involved in an ATV accident and lost the use of his legs as a result.

"On Oct. 18, 2020, a new chapter of Levi's life journey began," explained brother Kelsey Jamieson. "In a matter of few hours, he was in Moosomin hospital, then in a STARS helicopter, off to Regina General Ĥospital for a

The stop in Regina would prove to be brief as Levi was then transported by air ambulance to the Jim Pattison Children's Hospital in Saskatoon.

"Levi was in an induced coma and treated for his trau-matic brain injury," continued Kelsey. "Once the doctors felt he was stable enough, he was sent for an MRI, which resulted in them finding a back injury requiring surgery."

During that surgery, a plate and screws were used to stabilize a fracture between Levi's T8 and T9 vertebrae. He was then moved to the Wascana Rehabilitation Centre

"He was tien invected the wascalia kelabilitation Cellule in Regina.

"He was in a pretty big rush to get home and even convinced the doctors to give him a weekend pass so that Mom, Dad and Levi could head home for deer hunting." Kelsey said. "With the family's help, Levi got a deer and boy, was he ever happy! At this time, Levi realized that nothing was gonna stop him from doing the things he

Soon after that weekend outing, a COVID-19 outbreak hit the rehabilitation centre, giving Levi the option of either staying in his room or being discharged to return

"He couldn't get packed and loaded fast enough and hit the road," Kelsey said of the easy decision. In January of 2021, the Jamieson family was contacted

In January of 2021, the Jameson family was contacted by the Moosomin Shriners, who offered their help with future assistance regarding Levi's spinal cord injury. "This was simply amazing, and we were soon put in contact with the Shriners Hospital in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania," Kelsey said.

The first visit to the Philadelphia Shriners Hospital was from May 24 to June 4, 2021, where Levi met with a spinal condensation that distinction for high bill the part of the philadelphia said applies.

"From the bottom of my heart, I want to sincerely thank the Shriners tonight and each person, family, business, and organization that has crossed my path and supported me on my journey," Levi said. "Please know that I'm truly grateful. I've said this before, but I want everybody to know that with determination, love and support, anything is possible. My thoughts are that being in a wheelchair is not a disability, it's an ability to do things differently. Thank you."

Moosomin Shriners

active in the community
There were also some donations that the Moosomin Shriners made recently, including to the Machniak family after young Koby was involved in a motocross accident over the summer. Kennedy Langevin of Elkhorn was another donation recipient after her accident while riding a horse, and the Shriners also donated to the Terry Lynd baskethall court basketball court.

"All of this would have not been possible without the hard work of all the nobles and ladies of the Moosomin Shrine Club and of course we need continued support of the community to our fundraising events," Ilustrisimo said

The annual fall concert is the largest fundraiser for the Moosomin Shriners, and while the final numbers have not been confirmed, an estimated $10,000 was raised during the event. Other fundraising efforts include selling calendars and the annual Rose Day (this year, selling 600 dozen roses).

Moosomin Remembrance Day Ceremony

Moosomin's Remembrance Day ceremony was held on November 11, with a service at the Legion followed by the laying of wreaths at the Cenotaph. The Princess Patricia's Canadian Light Infantry attended the service. This is an annual tradition based on the PPCLI's long-standing connection with Moosomin. Sgt Harry Mullin of Moosomin was a PPCLI soldier who was a Victoria Cross winner. The PPCLI always visit Mullin's grave at the South Cemetery in Moosomin before the ceremony.

Students from grades 3-6 from Elkhorn School participated in the "No Stone Left Alone" event where they honoured veterans with a Remembrance Service and placed poppies on the graves of those who served.

Helping the young remember veterans

Every November across Canada, local schools or community halls are the site of various Remembrance Day programs and services.

programs and services.

For the most part, they are all a standard format. At the end of most school programs, the students go back to their classes. There might be some a talk atterwards about the service or perhaps during the past few weeks students have been busy doing Remembrance Day art work, or even better, preparing entries for the annual Royal Canadian Legion's local and national poster, essay and poetry event.

and poetry event.

This event was started many years ago to help school children remember the sacrifices made by Canadian men and women over the years in the many wars and peace-keeping operations they have been in, and there have been many! been many!

been many!

However a new approach has been gaining popularity in the last several years that's called "No Stone Left Alone." The Grade 3 to 6 students from Elkhorn school, along with staff members, took part in this unique Remembrance Ceremony on November 3. Retired Canadian Forces Captain Kevin Tutthill, CD, who is also a former Elkhorn School principal, initiated the program at the local level by partnering with the local Royal Canadian Legion Branch #58 and the school for the event.

A survey of the local cemetery was carried out by local

A survey of the local cemetery was carried out by local volunteers to locate all the grave sites of Canadian military or former military members that are buried. The next step was to mark each grave with a small Canadian flag. Two full bus loads of children came out to the cemetery and took part in the traditional Remembrance service. The event also brought out eight former and retired teachers from Elkhorn and the area who at one time had taught in the Elkhorn School.

The service included the poem, "In Flanders Field" by the students and teachers, and the prayer of Remembrance by Comrade Margaret James. This was followed by the "Commitment to Remember" by student Ryan An-

Legion, the Canadian Armed forces, CWO Chad Lelond, CD, and province of Manitoba MLA Greg Nesbitt. This was followed by the singing of "God Save The King." It was after this event that things changed. All of the school children were given a few poppies to place on the flag marked graves of Canadian military veterans. The children spread out in groups and as singles to every corner of the cemetery to lay their poppies and read the names and dates on the tombstones and to place a single poppy to honor them. There were even some who found a past family member!

Perhaps for the first time for these young children, the names on those graves took on a new meaning and they became someone who was real and once part of their community who had served Canada in times of war and Consider.

Once they were back on the school buses they had one more stop at the Elkhorn St. Mark's Anglican Church. There in the front yard, next to the church door is a single, D.O.D military gravestone of an veteran from the area. He is not buried there, but it was placed there by his family. Mr. Tutthill told the students the unique story of how it was placed there and but them cannot be suited that the students. it was placed there and let them come up for a visit and to leave a poppy. That was the last official event of the "No Stone Left Alone" movement and the students and teaching staff members, along with the invited guests, went to the Legion Hall to be served hot chocolate.

A lunch was held in the legion hall for the invited guests of the event. MLA Greg Nesbitt said, "This was a great school and community event to bring home the message to the kids that their grandparents fought in wars before they were born and it helped them to learn about our veterans. It's very hard for kids today to relate to war sofilist; that have good so long are My thanks.

about our veterans. It's very hard for kids today to relate to war conflicts that happened so long ago. My thanks goes out to the community members, Legion and teaching staff, that held this important event."

Chad Lelond CD said, "This event, 'No Stone Left Alone,' is a fantastic program to involve the young and future generations to learn. There are now almost no WWII or Korean War vets left that the young can first have see that they can learn firsthand what war conflicts are to so that they can learn firsthand what war conflicts are like. By putting poppies on the grave sites it makes a connection for them. Lest we forget."

Kevin Tutthill, the driving force behind this event said,

"We had such a great experience for our first year of this program in Elkhorn. The Elkhorn School and Legion were so quick to jump onboard and both groups made it so easy. A big thanks to our MLA, Greg Nesbitt, for joining us for the day, and a member of 26 Field Regiment of the Royal Canadian Army, Shilo, (the army reserve unit the Royal Canadian Army, Shilo, (the army reserve unit in Brandon), just to round out our attendance.

"We had several community members, including for-mer retired teachers that joined us, as we walked about our beautiful cemetery, and the co-operation from the weather as we spent some time honoring and remembering our community veterans. This week of remembrance reminds us all to stop, think and observe every day just how lucky we are in Canada."

Remembrance Day at Elkhorn School

BY ED JAMES

The school gym was filled with neat rows of chairs and the younger Elkhorn School children arrived with their own very small chairs and got a front row seat for the Elkhorn School Annual Remembrance Day Service.

The gym had all the of students and staff on hand and a good number of parents and grandparents.

After the arrival of the local Legion Color Party and members of the Ladies Auxiliary, the senior band students, under the leadership of music teacher Sandra Unger, played O'Canada.

For the next hour the students performed a number of Remembrance Day songs and poems old and new along.

with some band selections. Mixed in with performances, were some videos of Canada's wartime history.

A unique part of the program was that most of the narration of the program was done by Ms. Hall's Grade 11 History students. Another unique part of the program were the wartime letters that had been written home to family members which were read out by Grade 5 and 6 students. students.

The traditional and haunting "Last Post" was played perfectly by senior band member, Lukas Baer.

Near the end of the program, Legion member Margaret James, with the help of Legion member, Ed Clayton, gave out a large number of awards to the students who had
