up at Rocanville, he never imagined he would be meeting with royalty and part of events seen around the world. Williamson is Riding Master of the RCMP Musical Ride. In that capacity, he led the RCMP contingent that escorted King Charles during the Coronation, and he was there to present Noble, a mare from Saskatchewan trained by the RCMP, to the new King just before the Coronation. He was also in London last fall to lead the procession for the Queen's funeral. Following is an interview editor Kevin Weedmark had with Williamson on his return to Canada.

Canada.

How does it feel to be part of this? You've got to pinch yourself. When I joined the RCMP 23 years ago, these were not things that I saw in my future aspirations or things that I would get to do. It sounds cheesy, but you have to think, "How the heck does this small town farm boy from Saskatchewan get to these positions where you're talking with the king, hand-ing a horse over to the king, staying at Windsor Castle ord participating in these massive state events?"

and participating in these massive state events?" It's certainly incredibly, incredibly humbling and it makes you proud. It really does.

the RCMP and certainly represent Saskatchewan. Not just the simple fact that I was there representing Saskatche-wan, but even the horse itself, Noble, had some Saskatchewan links—that was the young boy from Saskatchewan who had named that horse.

A lot of these things almost seem serendipitous. Bur-mese, the first horse that was presented to the Queen, was born and raised in Saskatchewan and then eventually made her way out to become the Queen's horse-she was an all black mare. Then all of a sudden here we are in 2023 gifting the first horse to the King and it just happens to be an all black mare that also has links to Saskatchewan. When we breed our horses it's kids across Canada that name them, but if it's a mare which Noble is, the actual registered name has to start with the first letter of the sire.

registered name has to start with the first letter of the sire. So in this case, Noble, her sire is actually Henry, which is a stallion that we have at the breeding farm. So her actual registered name when I went and looked at her passport is actually Her Noble. So again, it just seems serendipitous that her actual reg-istered name is Her Noble and that this was chosen back in 2016 before we ever thought of her being the King's horse horse.

Scott Williamson proud of part in Coronation Continued from front

Tell me how this came about. Similarly to the Queen's funeral the request came in from the royal household that we were going to be requested to attend the royal coronation. A few months ago that came, that it was likely going to be happening, but it probably wasn't until a month prior to the coronation where every-thing was solidified and confirmed that we would be at-tending.

The King chooses who would be the representatives of the Commonwealth and again, similar to the Queen's fu-neral, there was a contingent of Canadian Forces the King had requested and he also requested the RCMP attend as

How was it decided which five members would go? Did vou make those decisions?

There are a lot of similarities to the queen's funeral. There was direction from the Commonwealth that there would be a certain rank, structure so very similar to the queen's fua certain rank, structure so very similar to the queen s ru-neral. There was a commissioned officer, a warrant officer and some NCOs. Where things get quite a bit different from say a contingent of the Canadian forces who is marching, was we had to ensure that the members who attended had the skill set to ride the horses. So that would have been a main criteria and we knew early on if we attended the coro-nation that it was going to be quite a bit different than the Queen's funeral. The funeral itself was quite subdued and quiet as opposed to the coronation. We were fully expecting a celebratory atmosphere which means full of noise and commotion, which we knew would affect the horses. So we knew that the main factor had to be skills and the members had to meet a certain skill set requirement. Then once we had narrowed that down it was a focus of ours from there to make sure that we had members that were well representative of Canada. Anyone can look at the members that were riding in the coronation parade and be proud that they were demographically what Cana-dians would expect to see. We had one from Quebec, one from the Maritimes, one from the Halibu First Nations, one who is of Tibetan an-

When you went over there, was it a similar situation where the horses and riders had to get accustomed to one another?

Very similar. It was kind of nice going back because we had just been there in September for the Queen's funeral, so we had a pretty good idea of what was going to happen, where we were staying, etc. We already knew a couple of riders that went for the coronation who were already there for the function the constant with which were going to continue to match them up with the same horse. A couple of the riders were new and we wanted to get them accustomed to the horses so we put them on horses that we thought would be the best match. Then after a coubecause the rider and the horse just weren't fitting together as we'd hoped. So we made a change in that regard and then once we had done that it was all focusing purely on the coronation itself. So everything we did, every time we everyted the horse and moved them around the property we versised the horses and moved them around the property of the castle we made sure that we set it up exactly how we were going to do it for the coronation. We mimicked that best as we could. scenario a

Did you have a dress rehearsal on the streets of London at any point? We did. We had one full rehearsal on foot and that one was held at the Royal Air Force base. That one was differ-ent than at the queen's funeral. There were more rehearsals for this than there were for the funeral. There were note refleatable for this than there were for the funeral. The first rehearsal that we had was at the Air Force base and it was more to deal with the timing. There was a lot of stepping off all at the exact same time and we'd go down the route maybe a hundred yards and we'd stop and then do it again and then stop and do it again. So there was a lot of getting that timing becautedly parfect stop and do it again. So there was a lot of getting that timing absolutely perfect. We were looking at almost two kilometers of procession and the front of the parade had to step off at exactly the same time as the back end of the parade—like when the Gold State Coach left the Abbey. So there was a lot of preci-sion in that regard and trying to get the timings right for the people that were marching and of course the horses. So getting that timing right was the very first rehearsal. The second rehearsal that we did was the full dress rehearsal through the middle of the night, so we made our way into London at about 10 o'clock in the morning and made our way to the Abbey and did a full rehearsal from about 2:30 in the morning to about 3:30 in the morning, so that was our in the morning to about 3:30 in the morning, so that was our main dress rehearsal.

How do they decide the order? It looked like it was you folks on horseback and then the Household Cavalry. How do they figure out who goes where? In our position itself, we were the lead of the Sovereign's Escort. It was made very clear to us that ours was the key position of the entire procession because if our was the key move forward then that meant the horses behind us got clogged up and then the Gold State Coach would stop and that was considered a mission failure. So it was critical that in our position we kept those horses moving forward—so again, similar to the queen's funcal, it was quite the hon-our to be given that position and I think it only speaks, once again, to our close relationship with the Royal Family. Not just the RCMP either, I suggest that for all of Canada there's no question the close relationship with our country, and I think it shows by the positions that we get put in at these here other according. large state occasions.

So how did it go? Were there any hitches or did it go

So how that it go, were there any intense of dud it go exactly as planned? I honestly couldn't be happier. If I had scripted how well it went we definitely hit all of the marks. The team that went had put in a lot of work with long hours and days, but the work paid off for itself and the horses were tremendous. I couldn't have been happier.

I know that before the Coronation, the RCMP had pre-I know that before the Coronation, the RCMP had pre-sented Noble to the king. Were you there for that as well? I was, yes. So we flew in on April 27 and we got into Windsor at about one in the morning and then by five in the morning we were back up and preparing for the gifting of Noble to His Majesty. So it was a bit of a whirlwind and it was pretty special, for sure.

And how did that come about? Had he requested a horse or had the RCMP offered it? It was Her Majesty that had requested it and the request came in about a year and a half ago. The horse that the King has been riding is a horse by the name of George who we gifted Her Majesty quite a few years back. Now that he's 23 years of age, he's getting to that point where he's ready to retire, so about a year and a half ago, Her Majesty had quietly made some comments to the stud groom that she'd be ready to accept another RCMP horse. So the stud groom quiety made some comments to the stud groom that she d be ready to accept another RCMP horse. So the stud groom had advised us and we started putting the microscope on a few horses to look at what they might want and we were told at the time that they were looking for a gelding and that they were looking for a horse that had been in the Mu-sical Ride for quite some time—so was a seasoned veteran. Then it just so happened that last May when he was the Prince of Wales he actually came to Canada and he came to the stables. We had put a couple of horses aside that we thought might meet what he would be looking for and he made a comment when we showed him these two horses, about the size of them. So then we got thinking, "Okay maybe these couple of horses that we showed him, that we thought would be a good fit for him, are too big." So we went back to the drawing board and with that we couldn't come up with a gelding that we felt would fit his needs. But this one young mare who was in her first year last year in the Musical Ride, she just kept standing out as a horse that we thought showed really good potential. Then when the Musical Ride came back to Ottawa in November, I took the mare on and started to do some work with her.

When the Musical Kide came back to Uttawa in November, I took the mare on and started to do some work with her. I started specifically to do some work that I thought her job would entail when and if she went over to the King. Sure enough, everything she did she hit it out of the park. She was exactly what we were looking for. So then we ad-vised the Royal Household and said that we were leaning vised the Royal Household and said that we were leaning towards this mare and that she's a young mare—so both points that they were initially looking for, we were going in the opposite direction. They said, "We'd still be happy to take that horse. We have full trust in you that that's the horse you'd choose." So that gave me the full green light and we just put a lot of work into the horse and that's kind of how it came to be.

What was involved in that ceremony?

The king actually chose to do the gifting right in the quadrangle, which is a large open area on the south side of Windsor Castle. There were four of our horses that we had gifted the Queen as a backdrop and we had Noble up front. I was holding Noble as the King came up and then I handed over the reins of the horse to the Commanding Of-ficer of the Musical Ride and then handed the reins over the Commissioner of the RCMP and Commissioner of ficially handed the reins over to the King. It just signified the handing over of the horse from Can-ada and the RCMP to the King, and he officially accepted it at that time.

Have you heard lots from people back at home? Did lots of people see you as part of the coronation? Yeah, my dad and many of my friends that still live back home in Moosomin and Rocanville sent lots of messages and it's been quite nice. It's nice to be able to represent, for sure

So how are you going to top this? Ha ha. I think by retiring. I don't think there's any top-ping this—being part of the Queen's funeral and now the Coronation, this is the Stanley Cup for us, and all of it to come in one year is crazy.

Hindley says in-patient treatment beds will be part of addictions spaces rollout

The province is in the midst of rolling out 150-200 addictions treatment spaces across Saskatchewan. So far 62 spaces have been an-nounced but they are all post-treatment housnounced but they are all post-treatment hous-ing, or virtual treatment spaces. None of the spaces announced so far are in-patient treat-ment spaces, for which there are long waiting lists. There were proposals submitted from around the province for in-patient facilities, and the World-Spectator reached out to Ad-dictions and Mental Health Minister Everett Hundra lest work to ach if there will be come Hindley last week to ask if there will be some in-patient spaces included in the program. The full interview with editor Kevin Weed-

When this program was first announced was the intention to have a whole range of treatment options under the program? When we first announced that we'd be adding another 150 more treatment spaces, the reason we stated it that way is because we had an idea of what might come in, in terms of proposals and submissions In, in terms of proposals and submissions from various organizations and groups. But I don't think we fully knew what might come in so we didn't want to limit it by saying, "Okay, it will just be inpa-tient intensive treatment spaces," in case a group or an organization comes in saying, "Hey, we can offer this or that as part of the continuum of service."

"Hey, we can offer this or that as part of the continuum of service." So we purposely left it wide open that way, also based on what I've been seeing as minister and what we as the govern-ment have been seeing happening in other jurisdictions, knowing that there are some different approaches to how you offer treatment for addictions. So that's why, as you're starting to see the roll out of this in a variety of different phases here, some less traditional methods for treatment in terms of adding capacity to the system.

At this point three different projects have been announced. Do you have any idea at this point how many projects there will be across the province in the end? Where are you at in the process— are you talking to the proponents one-by-one? We had the RFP (Request for Proposals) process open last summer in which we had encouraged groups or organizations who had been contacting government or just been following this issue and want to provide assistance in providing treatment capacity, and we allowed for that process for submissions to come through. Now as a result of that, when the Re-quest for Proposals closed early last fall, in September, obviously there was a number of different submissions that came in from

of different submissions that came in from across the province. Some are more ready than others to be implemented quickly. So I think what you've seen in the first phase and in the start of the second phase, is some of the submissions that came through that were reviewed by of-ficials that were deemed to be beneficial and would have been approved. But these are ones that are easier to implement in a quicker time frame. So that would be the 14 quicker time frame. So that would be the 14 and 12 post treatment beds at St. Joseph's Addictions Recovery Centre in Estevan where they already have some established where they already have some established programming, but as a result of the space that they currently have, they were able to provide and submit a proposal that in-cluded the use of that for post treatment beds—which is important because you have pre-treatment beds, you have treat-ment beds, and post-treatment beds, and they're all important when it comes to the continuum of support for people strug-gling with addictions. The other component that's been an-nounced thus far is the 36 virtual spaces from Edgewood and that is a newer meth-

from Edgewood and that is a newer meth-od of treatment for those dealing with mild to moderate addictions. That doesn't necessarily replace the actual physical innecessarily replace the actual physical in-patient beds but I think it's an important component. When Edgewood made their submission as part of the RFP process, they had indicated that they would be able to get these operational—I believe they're doing it in one other jurisdiction in Canada right now so they have a bit of a track record in this, but they indicated that they could get these operational quite a track record in uns, our and a main that they could get these operational quite quickly. So that was something that was announced as well. There are still a number of other suc-cessful proponents. I'm not sure how many, I don't know the number off the top of my head, but these would be ones that are deemed to be successful and are being negotiated with our officials and we'll make some announcements as they become ready to be announced. Some of these would include actual creation of new inpatient treatment beds that do not exist now.

Whether it's construction of a facility, brand new from scratch, that could be a possibility.

You might also have some where a rou hught also have some where a group has submitted a proposal that in-volves taking an existing facility, one that's perhaps being used for other pur-poses or maybe isn't being used at all, and their proposal may include creating spaces might require some renovations to a that building.

So they're things that might take a little bit longer but they're being negotiated as part of the process and will be announced as they're ready to go.

I know there are some pretty signifi-cant waiting lists at some facilities for inpatient addictions treatment. Any idea how many of these phases will be set aside for inpatient treatment? At this point in time I'm not able to say how many there would be. You look at the number of treatment spaces that we've an-nounced thus far and out of the 62 of them so far in total—the 36 virtual spaces and 26 new post-treatment spaces—and I'm fairly confident that the target we set of at least 150 treatment spaces, that we will achieve that

Based on what I've been told in terms of the number of submissions that came in and the different proposals that were submitted, we will definitely be able to hit that target of 150 treatment spaces, keep-ing in mind that we've budgeted for this, not just in one budget year, knowing that we can't get these all off the ground and operational all at once. It takes a bit of a staged approach de-pending on the readiness of the projects, but I'm fairly confident in saying that there will be announced in the phases yet to come. Based on what I've been told in terms to come

What is the timeline? How long will it take to get through all of these submis-sions make all of the announcements and have these beds in place? It's tough to put a timeline on it. We have funding in this year's budget for some spaces. So we've got $2.1 million provided in last year's budget and $2.3 million in this year's budget, and as we start to see these getting operational and as we start to announce more successful proponents and have them ready to be launched, you'll see additional funding dedicated towards that in future budget cycles. So we're hopeful. Myself as minister and us as government are hopeful—we'd like to see these all open as quickly as pos-sible, given the circumstances, that that's not realistic either

So we have our teams working very aggressively to make sure that we're ne-gotiating with the successful proponents and hoping to get these announcements as quickly as we can. I hope that as we roll through Phase 2, that we have further announcements that we can make in the weeks and months ahead, but I do believe that some will stretch into next year's bud-get as well.

Hindley responds to question on CT Scanner I want to ask you a question about the CT scanner for the Moosomin as well. We're just looking at some new popula-tion projections and population stats for the area.

When you go within 100 kilometers of Mossomin, where there is no CT Scan-ner, you have a population of 56,786, and within 100 kilometers of Estevan, where there is a CT Scanner, you've got 44,939 people. So about 12,000 more within the area served by Moosomin. When we look at the projections, Moosomin is projected to grow by 20 per cent up to 2032 and Es-

Everett Hindley, Minister of Mental Health and Addictions, Seniors, and Rural and Remote Health

tevan is projected to lose about 2 per cent tevan is projected to lose about 2 per cent of its population. Given that, what would be your advice to the groups in Moosomin that would like to see a CT scanner? They believe that they have the numbers on their side—what should they be doing to try to bring a scanner into the community? We've had the opportunity to talk about this on a number of occasions and the MLA for that area, Steven Bonk, has raised this with me as well We've had a number this with me as well. We've had a number of discussions about it. It's a priority for him and of course for Moosomin and the surrounding area.

When it comes to budget decisions for the Ministry of Health, we take a look at all of those sorts of metrics that you've pointed out and we've seen it, we've done that in the past on previous projects and those that are underway. I would point to long-term care facili-ties that have more beds now than what their predecessors had, and that goes back to project, such as for example, the long term care facility in Swift Current that went from 194 beds in the previous three separate facilities to now 225 beds in that newer facility that was opened a handful newer facility that was opened a handful of years ago. In La Ronge we are in the process of working through and getting a start on the construction for a new long-term care facility in La Ronge. The current one is 16 beds and the new facility. will be an 80-bed facility and that logic also would apply to the provision of health care services. I know that the CT scanner has been for guite some time and continues to be a pri-quite some time and continues to be a pri-ority for the people of Moosomin and area. I know when Minister Merriman, the Min-ister of Health, and I had conversations as we're planning for the budget cycle, we look at where we have pressures and where we have growth, and as we're mak-ing these decisions, how do we prepare for the future?

I would argue that was put on display this past budget when we made an an-nouncement regarding a new hospital integrated facility in Esterhazy. Again, because we have a couple of facilities there that have been around for quite some time. They've been in place for decades and of course are showing their age, but that area is also growing in population as well. So when it comes to these decisions, those are the sort of the information and metrics that we look at. I continue to have conversations and it has been raised to me on a regular basis by MLA Steven Bonk and I know that individuals and groups from the town write emails to me as the minister and Minister Merriman and we'd encourage them to continue to do so—it's a conversation that we will definitely have with our officials as we plan for the future.

Net-zero impossible for SaskPower

Not all Premier Scott Moe's fights with the federal Liberal government have been completely necessary ... or even all that productive. Of course, there are dyed-in-the-wool supporters of Moe and his Saskatchewan Party who would take umbrage with this.

And there are many more casual political observers in this province who have their own valid reasons to oppose most everything Liberal Prime Minister Justin Trudeau has done. There are reasons why the Liberals and the name Trudeau are not popular here. As such, it's been good politics for Moe to simply op-pose most everything Trudeau does—whether it's the carbon tax that Liberals do keep raising because they believe it's somehow good for them or opposing single-use plastics that local rural and urban municipalities support because they are clogging up landfills. But while politicians know the value of telling people what they think they want to hear, the collective wisdom out there is usually wise enough to figure out what does make sense and is in their interests.

make sense and is in their interests. Maybe Moe and his Sas. Party ministers haven't ex-actly been known to pick their spots, but there are times when the battle it chooses with Ottawa is the right one. Last week's opposition to the federal government's goal of requiring electrical grids to be net-zero by 2035— something Moe described as "impossible and unafford-able"—is clearly the fight to pick. To make his case (or perhaps to clearly distinguish this fight from the usual political fights). Moe let SaskPower President Rupen Pandva do the initial talking.

That does sound reasonable. And in this era where politics is defined by sometimes less rational fights, it was a welcomed approach.

Conspicuous by their absence on the scoresheet were the names of Auston Matthews, Mitch Marner, John Tavares and William Nylander, the Leafs' so-called Core Four whose offensive production during the regular sea-son (146 goals, 351 points) propelled them to an 111-point season, tied for the fourth highest total of the NHL's 32 teams. This could be the year, Leaf Nation hoped. But not to be. As both Matthews and Tavares were held without a could during the antime senior Elorida directed and without a goal during the entire series, Florida dispatched the Leafs in unceremonious fashion, winning Game 5 in overtime, 3-2, after the Leafs starton, withing Game 5 in overtime, 3-2, after the Leafs stayed on life support with a 2-1 Game 4 victory. The unexpected elimination of the Leafs caused much anguish not only among the team's executives, but from the two Canadian sports networks, who don't openly root for the Leafs to succeed, but know that their audiences are boosted with every Maple Leaf tear for Boston Bruins' fans, who watched their team get stunned in the first round after an historically sensational regular season, where the B's accumulated more points than any other team in history. You may have heard the phrase 'anything can happen in a short series' and that was painfully true for the Bruins and the Leafs. Defend-ing champion Colorado Avalanche could also commisrate with the woeful fortunes of the Bruins and Leafs, surprisingly getting sidelined by the second-year Seattle Kraken in the opening round. The Stanley Cup playoffs don't always identify the best team in the NHL. That was undoubtedly Boston this season. But the run to the Stanley Cup identifies the team that got hot at the right time, that avoided serious inju-ries and possessed the undefinable qualities that separate winners from losers at crunch time.

Maybe next year for the Leafs. Again, the old refrain. Maybe next year.

Elkhorn's Touch A Truck fundraiser on Saturday

BY SIERRA D'SOUZA BUTTS

This Saturday, May 27, Elkhorn Early Learning Centre will be hosting a Touch A Truck fundraiser from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m., in support of revamping their daycare's backyard

The fundraiser will be happening at the Elkhorn Agri-cultural Grounds and will include more than 20 vehicles. First responder vehicles such as a police car, an ambulance, fire trucks will be there, as well as farm tractors, a combine, construction vehicles, an army truck, a zamboni, a school bus, a grader, a garbage truck, a snow plow and more, will be present at the event. "Kids will be able to look at the vehicles, and climb around and inside of it," said Claire Kincaid, board member of Elkhorn Early Learning Centre.

"We have face painting going on, we'll have a few dif-ferent kids games, a barrel train, and other stuff. There will be a canteen open as well." There will also be two Paw Patrol mascots at the fundraiser.

Kincaid said all of the proceeds made that day will go to support the centre's backyard, in order to make it more safe and enjoyable for preschoolers during the summer. "We're a not-for-profit daycare. Our backyard has grass, trees, and a sandbox, but there's no picnic tables for the kids to sit on if they want to sit outside and have a snack," she said "We also want to add a sun shade so when it's hot out

Kincaid said she hopes to see people come out in sup-port of the fundraiser and to have a great day.

"I think it will be a fun family event. How many other chances do you get to see inside of a cop car," she said. "We'll get to see inside vehicles, up close to vehicles in a safe way and just check them out. ## Town enforces dogs and cats at large bylaw Enforcement of nuisance bylaw

Council will be enforcing the town's nuisance bylaw on The nuisance bylaw focuses on issues of untidy yards, junk vehicles, and properties that are unappealing and potentially a safety concern.

The town's bylaw currently sends out an order of rem-edy to a resident or business who has an unkept property, and if that individual does not abide by the remedy, the town can charge the property owner the costs for cleaning up the property.

School requests to borrow Dial-A-Van

to porrow Dial-A-Van Rocanville School Community Council asked the town if they could borrow the town's Dial-A-Van occasionally to help with transporting students with mobility issues. "We understand that the town's van has two spots for wheelchair capabilities and are wondering if the school could use it on occasion to transport these students so that they can fully take part in their classes' activities," the letter stated. the letter stated.

"Trips like being able to go to the museum, library or even to a family's farm for a field trip are typical of what has been done in the past. We, of course, would pay for fuel and follow any of the rules that the council deems are required." Council passed a motion to allow the SCC to use the

SaskPower replacing power poles Council received a notice from SaskPower to let the town know that workers will be coming into town to replace 25 power poles within Rocanville.

The replacements are due to the failure of power poles or because of height issues. The letter did not give a time-line for when the repairs will start in town by SaskPower.

Discussion about

retention pond pump Council received a request from Jeannot Electric— which is providing the a pump for the town's retention pond—about whether the town would like to have a switch or a timer for their pump. Council discussed the advantages of having a switch for the pump as opposed to having a timer. They asked to see quotes of the differ-ent cost for the switch and timer, and will decide after what to move ahead with.

The retention pond is on the southeast side of town and the pump will be used to pump water from the pond un-der the highway to the town's golf course or lagoon.

Whitewood Fire Service Agreement

Council passed a motion to approve the Fire Service Mutual Aid Agreement with the Town of Whitewood. The agreement states in case of emergencies, the White-wood Fire Department can request assistance from fire-fighters in Rocanville.

Walk for Down Syndrome in Moosomin on June 17

BY SIERRA D'SOUZA BUTTS Tracy and Carmelle Boutin are fundraising and hosting a Down Syndrome Walk in Moosomin on Saturday, June 17 in support of spreading awareness about the cause

"We're doing the Down Syndrome Walk. We've done this a couple times and it's always been in Regina so this year we thought we would do it again, but we thought we would do it again, but we would do it in Moosomin instead of going to the city," said Tracy. "We hope fundraising this event in small town Moosomin will show that not everything has to happen in big areas such as the cities

"Some people can't always make it or want to be in the cities, it's not for every-

"Small communities are great support-ers, we all seem to know each other one way or another. Also, people with down syndrome live in small communities as well

"We watch out and help support each other in times of need."

People are welcome to participate in be-tween a 2km, 3km, or 5km walk around the town that will start at 11 a.m. and go until 1 p.m.

Tracy said maps of the different paths will be handed out on the day of the fundraiser.

"We decided to walk this year because it's a great cause and because we th we could raise some money for the Down Syndrome Walk," Tracy said.

"This cause is important to us because it helps families like us, and you find help, support and resources about Down synme ' drome." People can donate to Carmelle's fun-draiser by going to the Canadian Down Syndrome Society website and searching for Team Carmelle Boutin. People can also donate at Carmelle's do-nation page (see QR code at end of story). "It would be great to see Team Carmelle raise our goal of $1,000. If we happen to go over, that would be even greater as it will show our support to families across Canada," said Tracy.

"The year Carmelle graduated, we did a Down syndrome walk and we raised $5,000. It was good." Tracy and Carmelle were asked if they

"We'll see how this year goes. I would like to," Tracy said. "I think it is a good thing, we'll see if it brings the community out. I just want to keep Carmelle active in our community."

Tracy said her main goal for the fund-raiser is to spread awareness about Down syndrome and that Down syndrome lives

Saskatchewan Lieutenant Governor Russ Mirasty and Donna Mirasty met with King Charles III at Buckingham Palace on May 16.

"It was a great honour to meet with the King and to thank him for his service to Canada and to the Commonwealth," said Lieutenant Governor Mirasty. "Donna and I were pleased to discuss our province with His Majesty, and to extend congratulations and best wishes to him on behalf of the people of Saskatchewan." Their Honours presented the King with two gifts, including a beaded medallion representing the Lieutenant Governor's crest, created by Cathy Lavallee of the Lac La Ronge Indian Band.

They also shared with His Majesty that a donation has been made by the Government of Saskatchewan in the name of the King to the Embracing Life Initiative (EL). EL is an affiliation of agencies, tribal councils and grassroots community youth mentors whose goal is to decrease incidents of self-harm and suicide among northern Saskatchewan youth. The Lieutenant Governor is the Honorary Patron of EL.

Canadian vice-regal representatives traditionally meet with the Sovereign at the start of their term. Due to the pandemic, and the passing of Her Majesty Queen Elizabeth II, an audience never took place. His Honour the Honourable Russ Mirasty was sworn-in as Saskatchewan's twenty-third Lieutenant Governor in July of 2019.
